Croydon, England, August 29.—(AP)—The Pride of Detroit left Croydon at 8:32 o'clock this morning for Munich, Germany, on the second lap of its round-the-world flight.

London, August 28.—(AP)—William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee in the monoplane, Pride of Detroit, 23 hours and 21 minutes out of Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, breezed into Croydon airport at 10:35 o'clock this morning on the first lap of their round the world hop. A mere handful of people, mostly blue-coated, helmeted London bobbies, reporters and moving picture men—more than 200 in all, ran across Croydon Aerodrome field to greet the first two who have ever flown from America direct to London.

Brock's first words to a policeman were in the form of an apology for being a little behind schedule. "I'm sorry to have kept you fellows waiting," he said with a tired smile as he started to explain something about being delayed three hours because of having lost his way in the mist off South England.

Schlee chimed in with "We are late, aren't we? Hope we didn't keep you standing around here all morning."

File Out of Cock Pit.
Then as the bobbies joined hands and formed a cordon around the Pride of Detroit, the two fliers piled out of the cockpit. While stretching their cramped legs, Brock and Schlee had ample opportunity to exercise their arms and hands as general handshaking began. The first to greet the two aviators was T. H. Kinkade, representative of the Wright Aeronautical corporation, who had been listening for the Pride of Detroit's motor hum for nearly six hours. Then Dalasek, traffic manager of the Imperial Airways, welcomed the two Americans and extended to them the freedom of the port.

Schlee and Brock for a moment stood as if embarrassed, not knowing exactly what to do. Neither did any one else momentarily, so finally the police thought the handful of people were doing too much crowding and began pushing the spectators back. Having in mind the great crowd which turned out to greet Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, the two fliers, who were in goodly numbers. As a matter of fact there were nearly as many bobbies as all other persons combined, so the bobbies had no difficulty in handling the situation.

The Sunday newspapers, which gave the flight considerable first page space, had calculated that the fliers would arrive between 11 and 12 o'clock, but even at noon there were not more than 500 persons on hand in the region of the airfield, which, when Lindbergh arrived from Paris, had some hundred thousand to contend with.

The fliers experienced all kinds of weather en route. First it was splendid flying weather for three hours off Newfoundland, then they encountered fog, mist, sleet and rainstorms, at intervals, all the way along the

New York Pay-Roll Robbery Charged To Police Guard

Paymaster Is Found Dead in Auto Under Viaduct With Bullet in Head. $4,700 Is Gone.

GUILT IS DENIED BY ACCUSED MAN

Tells Story of Legacy Left Him by Aunt To Account for Purchase of New Automobile.

New York, August 28.—(AP)—A patrolman who was accustomed to guard Judson Hewitt Pratt, construction engineer, in the transfer of the weekly pay-roll money for his firm was arrested today charged with the murder of the paymaster and theft of $4,700.

Pratt was found dead in his automobile yesterday under a viaduct in the Bronx, a bullet through his head and the payroll money with which he had started from the office of the T. K. Rhoades company, builders, missing.

Daniel Graham, 23, is the man accused of the murder and robbery. He was arrested today when he returned from an all-night party in a new automobile, which he was said to have purchased a few hours after Pratt was found dead. He denied all knowledge of the crime.

Arrest Is Ordered.
The patrolman's arrest was ordered by District Attorney John E. McGehee after detectives had traced Graham's movements for a week before and several hours after the crime and had rounded up several witnesses whom they claim connected him with the crime.

Graham, police said, had been the paymaster usually assigned to accompany Pratt when the construction man took money to pay employees of his company engaged in the building of an apartment house on East Fifty-second street.

Last Monday, police records show, Graham asked and was granted a day's leave. Detectives told the district attorney that during the week the patrolman told several persons he was going to Albany to collect a legacy of "a lot of money" left him by an aunt.

Graham, who was known to fellow patrolmen and persons on his post as "Handsome," being off duty another patrolman was detailed to accompany Pratt yesterday with the payroll money, but, detectives say, before the substitute arrived, Graham, in civilian clothes, came up and stepped into Pratt's automobile, as if he was taking his regular assignment.

Just when the shot that killed the construction man was fired detectives did not know, but they said they believed Pratt was shot while near the new building which was his destination. They said four children in the neighborhood, who recognized the patrolman as "Handsome," told of seeing the policeman shoot Pratt from behind the steering wheel of his automobile less than 200 feet from the construction job, but the engineer's hat on the right side of the car and drive away.

First reports of Pratt's slaying said he had undertaken the trip from his company's office on Madison avenue to the Fifty-second street job accompanied by a guard, but detectives

MACON MAN FOUND SLAIN IN AUTO

L. Green Chambless, 51, Carpenter, Cut to Death and Car Left on Lonely Road.

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(AP)—L. Green Chambless, 51, carpenter, was found murdered in the tonneau of his automobile about 8 o'clock this morning, on a lonely short road near a lumber yard. His death was caused by a knife wound which entered near the windpipe about the center of the neck making an angle toward the left. Veins were severed from the result of which he met his death, according to the coroner's inquest, which was held this afternoon.

Chambless left his home Saturday night about 5:30 o'clock and did not return. When he left he had about $100 on his person and expected to make other collections. Ed Mercer, of South Macon, has been arrested in connection with the case.

When the body was found, it was crumpled down in the back of the car. It had apparently slipped down off the seat or had been thrown onto that seat after the stabbing. His shirt and clothing were covered with blood and blood was on the bottom of the car. He is believed to have been dead about ten hours when found.

Members of the sheriff's force were still working on the case late tonight.

YOUTH IS SLAIN, FIANCEE DYING

Couple Disappear Wednesday and Bodies Are Found Sunday—Six Persons Are Arrested.

Madison, Ky., August 28.—(AP) Fred Russell, 21, years old, was found dead and his fiancée, Miss Pauline Dearmon, 16, was found near by, brutally beaten and tied, near the old fairgrounds at Providence today. Police believe Russell was murdered and robbed and Miss Dearmon beaten by the robbers.

The young people, who were planning to be married soon, left home in civilian clothes, came up and stepped into Pratt's automobile, as if he was taking his regular assignment.

Just when the shot that killed the construction man was fired detectives did not know, but they said they believed Pratt was shot while near the new building which was his destination. They said four children in the neighborhood, who recognized the patrolman as "Handsome," told of seeing the policeman shoot Pratt from behind the steering wheel of his automobile less than 200 feet from the construction job, but the engineer's hat on the right side of the car and drive away.

SIX ARRESTS MADE FOLLOWING MURDER.

Henderson, Ky., August 28.—(AP)—Six persons, five men and a woman, were arrested at Providence, Ky., tonight and held for investigating after Fred Russell, 21, had been found slain and his fiancée, Pauline Dearmon, in an unconscious condition in the old fairgrounds there.

The men and woman all deny any knowledge of the crime. They are John Stevens, a brother, and Ethel Stevens, sister; Joe Howard, Harlan Reynolds and Homer Winstel. Sheriff F. W. Yarbrough, who made the arrests, declined to say what information he had. He took the prisoners to the Dixon jail.

Dewey Sigler, an Illinois Central railway watchman stationed near the fair grounds, said he heard an automobile enter the grounds about 3 o'clock Thursday morning, and that shortly thereafter he heard three shots. He did not investigate at the time. The next morning the car was found abandoned. Kerrie Blue, Webster county coroner, was in the searching party today.

HENRY P. THOMAS AND WIFE FOUND DEAD IN BEDROOM

Man Believed Temporarily Insane Because of Ill Health—Made Will Last Friday.

The death that he believed was near came to Henry P. Thomas, 45, 1000 St. Charles avenue, Sunday morning at 5 o'clock, when he sent a bullet crashing into his right temple. Just a few moments before he had fired two bullets into the head of Mrs. Ellie Curry Thomas, his wife, also 45. Both were dead when police forced entrance into the home where they lived alone. A temporary lapse of sanity was advanced by neighbors and by J. K. Jordan, Thomas' attorney, as the cause of the day's end.

Only two days ago, last Friday, Thomas had drawn up his will in the office of Attorney Jordan. At that time he told the lawyer that his health was exceedingly poor, that he was to undergo an operation in the near future, from which he did not expect to recover. He added that if his wife suspected how ill he was it would kill her.

The Sunday morning stillness of the St. Charles neighborhood was broken just after dawn when two rapid shots sent chirping birds in the deep-floored trees fluttering and window shades hurtling upward. Drowsy neighbors abandoned slumber and poked heads out front windows.

Neighbors Awakened.
Neighbors next door to the little white bungalow No. 1000 were awakened by the shots and heard them followed with peals of shrill, hysterical laughter. Police were rapidly summoned, but found the doors of the Thomas home locked. The windows were also locked.

Down the little alley to a double garage in the rear dashed the police. Halfway, another shot echoed. The laughter had long ceased. The windows with their screens of heavy burglar-proof wire afforded no entrance. Back to the front the police forced entrance.

In the bedroom lay two bodies and much blood. Spots of crimson stained the bed linen. Slightly apart from his wife Thomas lay with a pistol grasped in his right hand. Two ugly wounds, powder stained, which indicated that both shots had been fired at close range, gaped in Mrs. Thomas' head.

One bullet entered slightly above her left eye, another her left temple. That single shot entered Thomas' right temple, just above the ear.

Sick Long Time.

Pilot's Flight Birthday Gift, Wife Asserts

Mrs. Brock and Mrs. Schlee Jubilant as Mates Reach England.

Detroit, Mich., August 28.—(AP)—"It's the greatest birthday present he could have given me," Mrs. William S. Brock, wife of the pilot of the Pride of Detroit, said today, upon learning of the arrival at Croydon, England, of her husband and Edward F. Schlee, "Of course we were certain they would get there safely," she added. Today was Mrs. Brock's birthday.

Mrs. Schlee, constituting the other half of "we," said "I'm simply overjoyed. She expressed confidence that her husband and Brock would complete their flight around the world successfully."

Both women were informed of the successful landing in England this morning after maintaining an all-night vigil.

"Of course," Mrs. Schlee added, "there was a possibility something might go wrong but we did not worry."

Friends gathered bringing flowers, messages flowed in from other friends throughout the United States and the apartment became a center of interest even before the newspapers brought word of the successful flight.

After several hours of sleep, Mrs. Brock and Mrs. Schlee discussed plans, which are unknown to their husbands, of traveling to Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, to await the return of the fliers.

4 ENGINE HOUSES IN MASSACHUSETTS FIRED BY RADICALS

Sacco and Vanzetti Sympathizers Are Blamed for Damage Done Stations in Boston and Cambridge

Boston, August 28.—(AP)—Two engine houses in the West End district were set on fire tonight while apparatus housed in them was busy at a blaze in the Boston and Maine freight yards near by. Early reports to police headquarters said that both attempts at arson were similar to those carried out in Cambridge this afternoon and which Cambridge police attributed to Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers.

Both houses were left unguarded temporarily when the engines were called to a multiple alarm blaze on the edge of the freight yards just over the Boston side of the East Cambridge line.

Companies moving in from outlying districts to cover the two stations left deserted found a fire burning in the boiler room of a high pressure company's house, and a blaze in the captain's room of a ladder company's quarters. Both were extinguished without heavy damage.

Fires Incendiary.
Investigation showed both fires of undoubtedly incendiary origin and police headquarters immediately took action, sending a patrolman to every station house the moment it was vacated on an alarm.

The freight-yard fire was in a shed owned by the Boston and Maine railroad and used as a storehouse by the Massachusetts Lime and Cement company. A large quantity of building materials, including a quantity of dynamite, was stored in the shed.

The state police tonight began an investigation into both the Cambridge and Boston fires. Between 3 and 9 o'clock eight fires of incendiary origin were also locked.

SACCO-VANZETTI BODIES CREMATED

Demonstrations Are Staged by Reds in London and Moscow Against Executions.

Boston, August 28.—(AP)—A silent procession through eight miles of city streets, while more than 100,000 persons looked on, the bodies of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti were reduced to ashes late today at the Forest Hills crematorium. The ashes will be turned over to Mrs. Rose Sacco and Miss Luigia Vanzetti, widow and sister of the two executed radicals.

The ceremony at the crematory was brief and simple. There were no religious exercises, but Miss Mary Donovan, a member of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee, read a prepared eulogy in which she termed Sacco and Vanzetti "victims of the crassest plutocracy the world has known since ancient Rome."

Thousands Join Parade.
A persistent drizzle did not deter thousands from joining in the procession. Thousands more lined the streets as the silent cortege passed. At times the line was halted while mounted police, to the number of more than 100, cleared the way.

For the most part the march was orderly. Several times, when police attempted to check the following throng, there were outbreaks of protest, but once the procession left the downtown section it was speeded up and by the time the crematory was reached the onlookers and followers had been reduced to a few hundred.

The bodies of the two men were carried in hearses. At the start of the procession there were about 100 men and women bearing floral tributes. These latter were placed in automobiles and taken to the crematory.

Following the hearse were two closed automobiles with the curtains drawn. The first contained Mrs. Sacco, Miss Vanzetti and Sacco's son, Dante. In the other were Aldino Feliciani, Garner Jackson and Miss Donovan, of the defense committee. The curtains of the first car remained down throughout the procession. Mrs. Sacco, Miss Vanzetti and Dante did not enter the crematorium chapel where the last rites were held. It was said that the two women were overcome and that they both had fainted on the way.

Woman Red Scores Plutocracy.
When the procession arrived at the crematory the caskets were removed from the hearses and carried into the small chapel. A hundred sympathiz-

Pride of Detroit Fliers Tell Story of Flight

STRUCK 1,200 MILES OF BAD WEATHER

BY JAMES P. HOWE.
Croydon, England, August 28.—(AP) The flight of the first airmen to cross the Atlantic from America to London was characterized by remarkable success. Both fliers are more than encouraged and are confident they will succeed in looping the earth. Here is the composite story of William S. Brock and Edward F. Schlee as told to The Associated Press correspondent immediately after their landing: "We had wonderful flying weather at the start, but ran into what might be called a hurricane during the night which made us both sit up and take notice. This was some hundreds of miles off the coast of Ireland, and at times, in looking out of the cockpit, it was like glancing at a blanket of inky black. It was the darkest, bluest night either of us had ever experienced."

The rain poured in streaks and the wind tossed us about in a way which makes old fliers—and old sailors—like to talk about their experiences with the weather.

Going It Blind.
"Black? Why at times when we tried with our eyes to pierce the darkness it seemed actually that we had gone blind."

This storm lasted four or five hours, and then we came into a mist, but we were grateful to have weathered the gale, and in a way gained much speed and time with its aid, as for a while it was at our tail and helped us on our way.

"But it was mighty good to get here, let us say that. We were tired and good and tired. But worse still, we were hungry. We had a sandwich each en route, but that did not taste particularly good, as our minds were engaged with other things than food, and we scarcely tasted our thermos of coffee, which by the way was piping hot when we started, but got cooled off somehow in the higher atmosphere. At times we were two miles up, one must remember, perhaps, that had something to do with the hot coffee failing us."

"The first three hours of the journey were splendid, delightful, full of anticipation. We were naturally quite thrilled with the get-away, and as we sailed along at about 110 miles an hour we enjoyed every minute, until we began to encounter mist and fog and things. Why, the weather some hundreds of miles off Newfoundland was so pleasant and delightful for flying that we descended so near to the water that we got a good view of a school of porpoise out for their morning spin."

Sleet and Fog.
"Bad weather was encountered for about 1,200 miles of the flight. One of the worst spells of fog and sleet was somewhere about mid-Atlantic, and we maneuvered up and down at various heights trying to get out of this."

Long before daylight we calculated we were somewhere over Ireland. Our height was about 5,000 feet. It was cold and misty up there, freezing in fact, but the winds were still favorable for us and we were beating along at a merry pace."

"Just at break of day we sighted land, green country land. We had no idea where we were, but it occurred to us that we might be off our course more than we figured—that we might be over France or Spain. It was quite foggy at this time, very misty, and for a while seemed to be getting worse. We cruised about until sun, round and round for about three hours when we were able to see a sandy beach. We decided to drop a message in an effort to ascertain our whereabouts. Accordingly, Brock wrote a note on a piece of cardboard and we dropped the message overboard."

JEWELS VALUED AT $100,000 GONE

(By Leased Wire to the Constitution and the Chicago Tribune.)
Southampton, L. I., August 28.—Hunts of young men in fashionable sections of New York and Long Island resorts whose reputations might not bleach white in the light of a police investigation were being combed today in the search for the crooks who yesterday entered the boudoir of Mrs. James Hastings Snowden and departed with more than $100,000 in jewelry.

The crime has thrown a scare into society, congregated here for the summer, and every trail that might lead to a clue to the identity of the criminals is being followed by the authorities.

The investigation is being handled in three sections—by the local police, the district attorney's force and detectives of the Federal Insurance company, which holds a policy on the stolen jewels, also are conducting a search.

The home of the Snowdens, Heathcote, a generously gabled wooden structure which stands on a sparsely wooded, windswept knoll about three miles from here, was entered some time between 3 and 11 a. m. Saturday. The twelve servants, many of whom have been with the family for years, all were in bed. Each was questioned at length today, but no information of value was procured.

Mrs. Snowden, cast as the lead in the sketch, "Oriental Love," one of the features of the Hampton Folies, which opened Friday night, refused to withdraw from the matinee and evening performances, although shaken by her loss.

MOTHER IN STATE OF COLLAPSE AFTER ABSENCE OF NEWS

REDFERN'S MOTHER IN STATE OF COLLAPSE

(Copyright, 1927, by The Constitution and the Chicago Tribune.)

Rochester, N. Y., August 28.—Mrs. Frederick Redfern, mother of Paul Redfern, the Georgia aviator who is believed to be lost somewhere along the northern coast of Brazil or the Guianas, is in a state of collapse at the home of her mother, Mrs. Martha E. Thompson, in this city where she has been visiting for two weeks.

Mrs. Redfern sat all day in a darkened room, and since noon her condition has been such that medical aid was required.

Mrs. Redfern confidently expected to receive word from her son by 7 o'clock last night. He had promised her he would cable her as soon as he was able after reaching Brazil. When no tidings came late last night, the grieving mother broke down completely. She spent a restless night, and today her anxiety increased in the absence of any encouraging news regarding her son.

Mrs. Grace Kingsley, sister of Mrs. Redfern, is more optimistic. While Mrs. Redfern declined to see callers, Mrs. Kingsley asserted she believes the youth will be heard from soon.

Brunswick, Ga., August 28.—(AP)—Three full days have run their course and yet no shaft of news has cleft the veil of silence draped about Paul Redfern, young knight of the upper-blue, who sailed away on Thursday with far-off Brazil as his goal.

By the most optimistic estimates sounded before his start, the intrepid aviator is now more than 24 hours overdue at his objective. Good wishes of two continents for his success have now changed to fond hopes for his safety, for experts agree that no miracle of aeronautics could have kept him aloft until now.

His green and gold monoplane was stocked with fuel to carry him for 52 hours as an absolute maximum, and when dusk settled today his whereabouts had been a mystery for a full day more than that.

A sharp note of alarm was sounded last night, when returning airmen told in Miami of severe gales that had swept Redfern's plotted course off Hopetown, Great Abaco, in the British Bahamas group. Opinion was that if these disturbances had not brought him disaster they had at least forced him out of the course and to a landing far from the line he had planned to follow from Glynn isle, near here, to Rio de Janeiro.

Citizens of Brunswick and others who have closely followed his project were loath to chant any dirge for Redfern, because it was conceded from the beginning that no close check could be kept on his progress, and that if a mischance of weather or machinery should arrive he would be forced to bring the "Port of Brunswick" down in a spot probably remote from quick communication with the world.

It was declared here that his closest friends and his young wife, while anxious for his safety, were prepared

Name of Paul Redfern Added To List of Fliers Lost at Sea

GEORGIAN IS. 12TH TO "DISAPPEAR IN AIR"

New York, August 28.—(AP)—Temporarily at least, the name of Paul Redfern, Georgia pilot, has been added to the growing list of air navigators who, embarking on ambitious flights, apparently sailed off into a mysterious void.

No fewer than 12 names have been added in the last six months to that list, which is analogous in aviation to the disappeared at sea; unreported of the merchant marine.

There were St. Roman and Mounsey, who started from Bengal for Brazil last April; Nungesser and Gail, who followed a setting sun from France toward New York; in the current month were enrolled Pellar, Knappe, Frost and Scott and the first feminine name—Miss Mildred Doran, of the Dole race entries. Seeking the answer to their disappearance, Erwin and Eichwaldt apparently found the same fate.

more than 1,200 miles. The worst lap of the flight, however, was late last night or early this morning when they ran into a terrific windstorm, accompanied by rain. It lasted between four and five hours.

"We were absolutely blinded," said Brock. "We could not see a thing. The night was black as pitch. I never saw the beat of it." And Schlee agreed with him.

Handed Cigarettes. After landing both Brock and Schlee were handed cigarettes, since both were eager for a smoke, but they were English cigarettes, which were more highly valued than American and both had difficulty in getting a kick out of them.

They took turns at the wheel during the trip, neither getting any sleep. Both agreed that the trip was anything but monotonous, as they had much to do and think about to keep their heads going, especially during the day.

The aviators flew at heights ranging from 200 to 10,000 feet and encountered numerous contrary air currents. Their speed at times was about 80 miles an hour, but varied considerably. They had favorable winds most of the way. They had a hard sandwich between them, but neither relished it as their meals were otherwise occupied. They drank water and some coffee which was hot when they started but became cold during the voyage.

Schlee brought several letters, which were mailed.

Supremacy of Morning Paper

The average person wants his morning newspaper the first thing every morning, and feels lost without it. He wants to know what has happened over the world while he has been asleep. He knows, if he is any sort of an analyst, that the morning paper has first call on 75% of all the news that breaks over the world, and 90% of the news that happens locally.

The morning paper publishes first all the news that comes from noon until after midnight, and it is still news when it reaches the reader.

Give The Constitution the proper change instructions, and you will not miss a single copy of your morning paper.

Brock, who has been "missed a rev."

(meaning revolution).

One of the novel thrills of the trip, Brock pointed out in his chats with reporters, was experienced when he and Schlee had to pass through the customs of the Croydon airport. Two uniformed customs men on duty formally piloted the two new arrivals through the customs shed in a light seriousness asking them if they had anything to declare. Neither had an ounce of baggage.

Later mechanic assisting Kinkadee in inspecting the machine found the Pride of Detroit's fuselage a copy of Colonel Charles Lindbergh's book, "The Spirit of St. Louis," and a copy of the French flier Drouhin and Charles Levine occurred today and at one time it looked as if there would be another pugilistic encounter, which would have made Levine's record two consecutive days.

The American aviation promoter arrived at the Le Bourget at noon and asked Drouhin to take him to Deauville, as he desired to see the Grand Prix. He proposed that the flight be made in some other machine than the one on Paris, or Stuttgart, which Drouhin refused, saying he had been engaged for a trans-Atlantic flight aboard the Columbia and not to act as a taxi driver between Paris and Deauville. Levine retaliated by having the fuel tanks of the Columbia emptied, while Drouhin protested. Strong words were exchanged, but finally quiet was restored.

Drouhin then ordered the mechanics to remain near the Columbia at all times and have fuel ready to refill the tanks at a minute's notice. Weather conditions on this side of the Atlantic are steadily improving, and the experts believe there still could be some this week. Drouhin himself remarked that he would take the first moment conditions warranted it, but the weather is not likely to be that any start will be made tomorrow.

A personal friend of the French aviator said that Drouhin decided to start when ready, and so will inform Levine, giving him a few hours notice. He will ask the owner either to board the plane, or will take off alone or with a personally chosen navigator. Drouhin is said to be annoyed at the publicity surrounding his relations with Levine.

"I am not a lawyer, I am an aviator," he told a friend after his arrival with Levine today. "When flying weather comes I shall start."

Diendonne Costes, who hopes to fly the Atlantic in the plane "Nungesser-Coli," came to Le Bourget today and expressed satisfaction over the improvement in weather conditions.

"It looks very much as if this is the week," he said.

Leon Given, another overseas aspirant with the plane "Bluebird" is also watching meteorological conditions closely. Both planes are ready and bets are being freely made that the French machines will depart before the Columbia.

NEW NON-STOP TRIP MAY BEGIN TODAY

London, Ontario, August 28.—(AP)—After receiving weather forecasts to-night which were considered favorable it was announced that the Stinson-Detroit monoplane, St. John Carling, would leave at daybreak on its non-stop flight to London, England.

WINDSOR-TO-WINDSOR FLIGHT DUE TODAY

Windsor, Ont., August 28.—(AP)—Phil Wood and C. A. ("Duke") Schiller plan to hop off from the Walkerfield field about noon Monday in their Stinson-Detroit monoplane, Royal Windsor, on a non-stop flight to Windsor, England. After a careful study of weather conditions which were reported favorable, the two decided to make their start about noon, thus avoiding two nights of flying and enabling them to reach England in the day.

Schiller, who will pilot the plane, and Wood were honor guests Saturday night of the Royal Air Force club, of Windsor, at a banquet.

SILENCE STILL MARKS FATE OF PAUL REDFERN

to eling to hope even longer than did the searchers for Coli and Nungesser. All-starred fliers, whose route led them over a region more thickly set with people and ships than that chosen by youthful Redfern for his trans-continental junket.

Over Lonely Wastes. Wherever his plane has alighted, on land or sea, it is more than likely far from human habitation, for Redfern's course was to carry him over the least frequented sea paths of the lower Atlantic and the Caribbean. Then, after crossing the equator, he was to fly over Dutch Guiana and straight ahead over the Amazon and wild morasses that intervene between that colony of Holland and Rio de Janeiro.

If he has alighted on the sea, say those who have watched his preparations most closely, he has provisions to last him for several days, if his sturdy ship has withstood the emergency landing and the buffeting that a stormy sea would bring. It is on a landing in the sea that his friends plan their keepest hopes, for this would not bring the dangers with which a drop on the wild lands of South America would be fraught.

Added faith that some stretch of the Caribbean received Redfern, either in safety or disaster, is given by the belief both here and in South America that some word of him would have found its way back if he had crossed into Dutch Guiana or had neared Para, on Brazil's extreme northeast shoulder, a city which would be the first emergency goal Redfern would consider—if falling fuel on other causes kept him from Pernambuco, his secondary objective, or Rio, still farther south, the ultimate destination of his ambitious plans.

Rio Awaits News.

Rio de Janeiro and the rest of Brazil were prepared to receive Redfern and waited at the Rio landing field until all hope had been exhausted for his arrival there, according to frequent cables from the tropical capital.

While the unfathomable silence continued, the Brazilian government, the United States government and countless amateurs are sifting the air waves for some knowledge of the missing aviator. If he is sighted by some passing ship or otherwise apprehended in a place that has radio or wireless communication, it will be but matter of minutes until the world hears of his rescue, for commercial and other operators are on the quiver for a signal bringing news.

In Brunswick, where all preparations were made, where his blinding flight began, hope for Redfern's safety had in no wise been abandoned and crowds besieged the newspaper and telegraph offices for intelligence of the daring pilot this city has claimed as its own. Rumors have been recurrent since a few hours after his departure, but only once has word of even vaguest sort reached here. That was the report of a ship that the pilot and his plane had been sighted Thursday night, after less than 12 hours of his flight.

Offer of Aid.

Mrs. Redfern, naturally anxious for news of her young husband, has not relinquished hope, and today had not replied to offers from a commercial aviation firm in Miami to make an extended seaplane search in the lower Bahamas.

In connection with this proffer of assistance came word from the coast guard station at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., signifying eagerness to offer all its resources in an effort to comb the southern seas for Redfern.

FLIGHT STIRS SYMPATHY OF BRAZIL.

Rio Janeiro, August 28.—(AP)—Paul Redfern's disappearance in his attempted flight from Brunswick, Ga., to Rio Janeiro has stirred the sympathy of the Brazilian people. The general conviction is that he has not reached Brazil, and up to noon today the government reported no news of him. The Dallas Herald, via the national telegraph system, which continues to seek word from all areas within communicating distance.

The newspapers show much concern. The Correio Manha saying: "Brazilians are worrying as much as the Americans over the non-appearance of the aviator."

Journalists say: "We hope providence has protected the life of this brave man, Paul Redfern."

HOPE KEPT UP IN WASHINGTON.

Washington, August 28.—(United News)—No word has been received from the navy department regarding Paul Redfern, the Georgia flier who hopped off for Rio de Janeiro Thursday.

Only Redfern's parting request that he not be given up for at least six months keeps up hope here. Even if he survived the journey, he would be obliged to fly over many hundreds of miles of the most wild and dangerous country on the globe. Mountains, jungles, savage tribes, man-eating crocodiles, jaguars and rivers as wide as seas lay in his path.

HOME OF FATHER SHARES INTEREST.

Columbia, S. C., August 28.—(AP)—"Heard anything from Redfern yet?" was the question asked in Columbia today. The telephones of the newspaper offices and of the Associated Press office rang incessantly to board the plane, or will take off alone or with a personally chosen navigator. Drouhin is said to be annoyed at the publicity surrounding his relations with Levine.

"I am not a lawyer, I am an aviator," he told a friend after his arrival with Levine today. "When flying weather comes I shall start."

Diendonne Costes, who hopes to fly the Atlantic in the plane "Nungesser-Coli," came to Le Bourget today and expressed satisfaction over the improvement in weather conditions.

"It looks very much as if this is the week," he said.

Leon Given, another overseas aspirant with the plane "Bluebird" is also watching meteorological conditions closely. Both planes are ready and bets are being freely made that the French machines will depart before the Columbia.

NEW NON-STOP TRIP MAY BEGIN TODAY

London, Ontario, August 28.—(AP)—After receiving weather forecasts to-night which were considered favorable it was announced that the Stinson-Detroit monoplane, St. John Carling, would leave at daybreak on its non-stop flight to London, England.

WINDSOR-TO-WINDSOR FLIGHT DUE TODAY

Windsor, Ont., August 28.—(AP)—Phil Wood and C. A. ("Duke") Schiller plan to hop off from the Walkerfield field about noon Monday in their Stinson-Detroit monoplane, Royal Windsor, on a non-stop flight to Windsor, England. After a careful study of weather conditions which were reported favorable, the two decided to make their start about noon, thus avoiding two nights of flying and enabling them to reach England in the day.

to eling to hope even longer than did the searchers for Coli and Nungesser. All-starred fliers, whose route led them over a region more thickly set with people and ships than that chosen by youthful Redfern for his trans-continental junket.

Over Lonely Wastes. Wherever his plane has alighted, on land or sea, it is more than likely far from human habitation, for Redfern's course was to carry him over the least frequented sea paths of the lower Atlantic and the Caribbean. Then, after crossing the equator, he was to fly over Dutch Guiana and straight ahead over the Amazon and wild morasses that intervene between that colony of Holland and Rio de Janeiro.

If he has alighted on the sea, say those who have watched his preparations most closely, he has provisions to last him for several days, if his sturdy ship has withstood the emergency landing and the buffeting that a stormy sea would bring. It is on a landing in the sea that his friends plan their keepest hopes, for this would not bring the dangers with which a drop on the wild lands of South America would be fraught.

Added faith that some stretch of the Caribbean received Redfern, either in safety or disaster, is given by the belief both here and in South America that some word of him would have found its way back if he had crossed into Dutch Guiana or had neared Para, on Brazil's extreme northeast shoulder, a city which would be the first emergency goal Redfern would consider—if falling fuel on other causes kept him from Pernambuco, his secondary objective, or Rio, still farther south, the ultimate destination of his ambitious plans.

GOOD RAAGED

4,417,500 ACRES

Washington, August 28.—(AP)—Losses in the Mississippi river flood area included more than 225,000 head of horses, mules, cattle, swine and over 1,300,000 poultry, the department of agriculture announced today after a summary of estimates. It was added that the flooded area covered 4,417,500 acres in 124 counties or parishes, the report by states following:

Arkansas: 1,838,400 acres and losses included 9,250 horses and mules, 21,000 cattle, 60,500 swine and 525,440 head of poultry.

Louisiana: 1,112,200 acres and losses included 7,100 horses and mules, 19,630 cattle, 55,850 swine and 487,830 head of poultry.

Mississippi: 801,000 acres and losses included 7,275 horses and mules, 9,000 cattle, 22,690 swine and 263,300 head of poultry.

Missouri: 1,000 acres and losses of poultry were heavy and of swine considerable, but no estimates are given.

Tennessee: 195,000 acres and losses included 600 horses and mules and 4,900 swine.

Reports showed cotton was grown in 1928 on about 2,600,000 acres of the flooded area, corn on about 1,100,000 acres; hay on about 300,000 acres and other crops on about 370,000 acres. No estimates are available of how much of the flooded area was replanted this year; but an estimate will be made when the harvest is completed.

FREE STATE MINISTER RESIGNS PORTFOLIO

Dublin, August 28.—(AP)—Indication that the Free-State government's difficulties have, not all been surmounted, was seen today when it was announced that James J. Walsh, minister of posts and telegraphs, had resigned owing to disapproval of the government's policy.

Walsh is on the continent on a holiday and his complaint is that he was not consulted concerning dissolution of the Dail Eireann. He is chairman of the government party organization and is believed to have resigned that position also.

Although Walsh has been somewhat independent and often at variance with his colleagues, especially in his advocacy of a high protectionist tariff, he is a very popular minister, wielding much influence in the constituencies, and it is expected that his resignations will injure the government in the coming election.

He took the view that when the Finian Fail deputies consented to accept and take the oath of allegiance, the government should have welcomed this as a conciliatory act.

Announcement also is made by the Sinn Fein party that it will take no part in the general election.

AVIATOR BARRED BY ARMY GUIDES PLANE OVER SEA

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Milwaukee, Wis., August 28.—William S. Brock, pilot of the Priole of Detroit now on its way around the world, is having a sly chuckle at Uncle Sam.

Larry Lawrence, newspaper man and formerly one of Brock's student at Park Field, in Tennessee, early in 1918, tells why Brock is laughing up his sleeve now that he has dashed across the Atlantic.

"Brock was a civilian flyer and handled planes months before the United States entered the war," said Lawrence. "Naturally he wanted to get into the thick of the fighting, but Uncle Sam and his examiners refused to let him go. However, he was given a position as civilian instructor to youths who could pass the physical examination."

"You see Billy had flat feet and because of this he was rejected. Perfect arches are so vitally necessary up in the air, you know—so Billy taught other men who did not have his nerve or skill, and Uncle Sam lost what might have been one of his sterling aces. Now Billy and his flat feet are giving Uncle Sam something to ponder over."

"CEASE AND DESIST" ORDERS ARE ISSUED AGAINST 9 FIRMS

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Washington, August 28.—So-called "cease and desist" orders charging fraud and deception in promotion of Texas oil stock schemes have been issued against Shepard & Co., a Chicago stock brokerage firm, and eight similar companies in Texas by the federal trade commission, it was announced today.

These orders are the first results of an investigation into "blue sky" securities undertaken several months ago by the commission, which closed, it is said, in the cases of Shepard & Co. and the others that misleading statements as to methods of financing, false claims of ownership of large producing wells in the heart of proven fields, and of fabulous dividends to purchasers of stock were generally used in advertising.

Other firms against whom orders were issued are the Henry H. Hoffman and associates, Houston, Texas; J. H. Criss and associates, Fort Worth, Texas; Roller Oil & Refining company, Mexico, Texas; Dispatch Petroleum company, Wichita Falls, Texas; Perryman Investment company, Houston, Texas; Mid-American Oil & Refining company, Fort Worth, Texas; and Right Way Royalty Syndicate, Fort Worth, Texas.

MILLICENT PLANNING WEDDING IN OCTOBER

(United News.)—Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Salm, will marry her tall, romantic-looking Argentine, Arturo Ramos, in October, according to friends of the Rogers family.

The information was the subject of much speculation among the fashionable colony here over the week-end. Only members of the family and a few intimate friends are to be present at the heiress' second venture into matrimony, it was said.

Col. Sherrill Improving

Asheville, N. C., August 28.—(AP)—Continued improvement in the condition of Colonel Clarence O. Sherrill, city manager of Cincinnati, Ohio, leads to the belief that the nearest soon will be dismissed from Mission hospital here, where he recently underwent an operation for ulcer of the stomach, attendants said today. Physicians said that he passed a restful day and apparently is regaining strength.

2 Men Needed On Long Air Trips, Asserts Stinson

Northville, Mich., August 28.—(United News.)—"Long trans-oceanic flights should not be undertaken with less than two men aboard the plane," Eddie Stinson, "mean of fliers," told the United News in expressing his pleasure at the successful flight of William Brock and Edward Schlee. Stinson designed the Priole of Detroit, which was the winner of the 1927 Ford commercial airplane reliability tour, and was at his field Sunday to witness Brock's flight. Brock, a Florida aviator, made his first trial flight in a new Stinson-Detroit monoplane in which he and George W. Stinson, of Florida, had flown from Wheeling, W. Va., to Paris. The veteran flier's belief that at least two men should man a plane on long oceanic flights was expressed when he was told that no word had been received from Paul Redfern, who had hoped to alone last week in another Stinson-Detroit from New Brunswick, Ga., for Rio de Janeiro.

"I tried to get Redfern to take another man along with him," Stinson said, "but he evidently was not in his mind to hazard the trip alone. Fifty hours at the controls of an airplane is too long for the ordinary man to stand."

Two other Stinson-Detroit monoplanes, making five in all, are being groomed for trans-Atlantic flights, and are expected to leave for England, and the other from London, Ont., to London, England. The Windsor-Detroit flight was expected to get under way early this week, possibly on Monday.

RADIO EQUIPMENT EXPORTS OF U. S. LEAD ALL WORLD

Washington, August 28.—(United News.)—America leads the world in exporting radio equipment, and many and Great Britain close behind. The department of commerce reports that $30,000,000 in international radio trade for 1928 was accounted for by the United States, which is sharing to the extent of 29.4 per cent. Germany 25.6 per cent and Great Britain 20.5 per cent.

American radio sales have increased 52 per cent yearly since 1920 when the industry entered large scale production. Recently American loud speakers have been losing favor to European makes abroad.

55 RADIO STATIONS PLAN BIG HOOK-UP FOR ANNUAL FETE

New York, August 28.—Fifty radio stations in all parts of the United States, enough to insure that the world's record for radio stations involved in a single hook-up will be broken, already are definitely arranged for this year's annual radio industry banquet on the evening and night of September 21, it is announced by Major J. Andrew White, vice president of the Columbia broadcasting system and master of ceremonies for the big banquet.

In addition to the stations of the Columbia broadcasting system and networks of the National Broadcasting company, together with five New York stations which already are provided for, the hook-up will include many of them will be accepted, from 65 other stations.

Major White will put the entertainment on the air from a microphone that will carry this festival of fun from the speakers' table at the Hotel Astor in New York to the largest radio audience of all times.

MAN WHO SAT ON FRIEND'S HAT FATALLY STABBED

Baltimore, Md., August 28.—(AP)—Sitting upon the hat of his friend, John Kelly, 24, was fatally stabbed early today and Thomas Hoban, 24, the friend, was held on a charge of murder.

The stabbing occurred after a gay party. All in a hilarious mood, they left for a motor ride. Hoban found Kelly sitting on his hat. State members of members of the party made to police claimed the two began to argue and exchanged blows.

Physicians found Kelly had suffered stab wounds in the chest and one on the arm. He believed it was inflicted by a large penknife, but the police were unable to find a knife.

THIS NURSE NOW HAS GOOD HEALTH

Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and I am now in good health. I was without it in the house. As I am a children's nurse, I have to be on my feet a great deal and your medicine has helped me wonderfully. I was hardly able to do my housework when I began taking it, and now I am a strong and well woman, able to do all that and go out nursing babies. I have also used the Sassafras Wash and found it beneficial."—Mrs. GEORGE L. STEWART, 103 Davis St., Greenfield, Mass.

Valuable for Weakness

"I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a valuable medicine for weakness."—J. A. PIETSCHE, Box 397, Lancaster, Pa. Hundreds of letters like these are received by the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., from grateful women who say that their health has improved since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

AS TO "INSTRUCTIONS."

Replying to a letter from the head state official of the Mississippi Ku Klux Klan, asking for an "instruction" to the delegation to the next democratic national convention to vote against the nomination of Governor Al Smith, Senator Pat Harrison very aptly and wisely said that he favored a delegation uninstructed for or against any one, but if one of the other had to be, he favored an instruction "for" rather than "against."

In this he is correct. The various state delegations should go uninstructed. They will represent the party sentiment of their respective commonwealths. They will be chosen in convention by region of their honor, integrity, dependability and ability to cope with situations that may arise to the best interests of the party and its possible success at the polls.

The situation as to Mississippi applies also to Georgia. It is not probable that a delegation from Georgia, chosen in convention without instruction, and left to its own wisdom to do the best thing possible for the democratic party, would vote for the nomination of Governor Smith.

It would be unfortunate if the old issues of the 1924 convention should be revived. If so it is not thinkable that Georgia would become a party to sustaining either end of that old and disastrous feud. But, new situations may and no doubt will arise, which will demand acute attention. And such attention can only be rendered by an uninstructed delegation.

In Senator Harrison's letter to the grand dragon, he says: "I favor an uninstructed delegation to the next democratic national convention and am opposed to sending a delegation instructed against any candidate. So far as I know, no democratic convention in Mississippi has ever followed such a course. Mississippi delegations have always at democratic national conventions played an important part. Those delegations went uninstructed, and the delegates have never failed to represent truly the viewpoint of Mississippi. If the next democratic convention is to instruct the delegates, then, in my opinion, it would be much better to instruct them for some candidate than against some candidate."

He is right, except that it would be a mistake to instruct either for or against any one.

Georgia should send a delegation to the next convention fully competent to do the best thing possible, and fully clothed with that authority.

Both Mississippi and Georgia should join in the demand that the time has come for the democrats of the south to offer one of their own leaders for the nomination. And every other southern state should do likewise. Why not Harrison, of Mississippi—or McLean, of North Carolina?

THE PRESIDENT'S VIEWS.

Correspondents who have been with the president during his visit to Yellowstone park, and who have talked with him more than usual, are all practically agreed upon the recommendations he will make in his approaching message to congress.

First of all will be tax reduction. It is generally agreed that he will not specify any specific amount. That will depend upon the estimated surplus at the end of the present fiscal year, which will be made by treasury actuaries at the time the message is submitted.

It has been stated frequently that the consensus of the majority of the ways and means committee is that $150,000,000 should be the limit. Chairman Green, however, is quoted as favoring a larger amount. It is very probable that the reductions will be made in the high brackets so that business and industry may be further unshackled. There will be wisdom in this. It will stimulate productivity, thereby increasing employment, and at the same time it will help the masses, for all taxes against business and industry are passed on to the people.

The president will again urge farm relief, but he is understood to be as much opposed on the proposed McNary-Haugen bill as ever. His summer residence in the west, during which he has made a close study of agricultural conditions, has not changed his mind. It is believed he will recommend practically the Curtis-Crisp measure, which sets up a farm board, encourages cooperative marketing but does not assess equalization taxes.

Farm relief will be one of the real problems before the approaching congress, and politics will have a great part in the discussion. On the eve of the 1928 pre-convention campaign that one problem will probably become the political football of the seventeenth congress.

The president, it is said, will vigorously advocate "an adequate navy" and thereby hangs a problem. Just what constitutes an adequate navy will be the bone of contention. There are three schools of thought in congress on this problem. One is for a big navy of major ships, another is for sharp cut-throat, and the other is for a mean compromise between the two extremes. It is believed the president may specifically advocate the building of the eight new cruisers which are carried in his especially prepared budget. The president has materially broadened his views as to the navy since the failure of the recent Geneva conference.

Of course the question of Mississippi flood control will be an outstanding feature of the message. And in this he probably will follow the suggestions of Secretary Hoover, who has given almost his entire time during recent weeks to the problem, as a government representative, and also as a trained engineer. The secretary believes that all levees should be repaired before fall by the federal government and that federal relief should be given to the area which will have no crops this fall.

It is very probable that another recommendation may be for broadening the powers of the interstate commerce commission in order that it may be more successful in effecting railroad consolidations. There has been one of the president's hobbies.

It is said by correspondents that the president will not touch upon prohibition enforcement.

BOBBY WINS AGAIN.

For the third time Bobby Jones won the national amateur golf championship on the Minkakha club links at Minneapolis Saturday.

Perhaps the golfing world, from the inception of the ancient sport, never saw such mastery of the game as that displayed by the young Atlantan. The gallery gasped at his marvelous play.

In the finals he was matched against Chick Evans, of Chicago, another of the world's great golfers, but with 6 up at 18 he was seen an easy winner at the half-way post.

Again Bobby Jones will be accorded a great ovation when he reaches home with his new laurels this morning. And one in keeping with the merits of the most distinguished ambassador of clean sport and good will ever sent out by any city or community in America.

As some one has very aptly said, Bobby Jones is the greatest golfer the world has ever known and, very probably, will ever know.

EAST VS. WEST IN PRODUCTION.

One important reason why Texas is enlarging its cotton acreage so rapidly is the success which has attended large-scale cotton production in that state. This is the kind of production which is being employed in the semi-arid range territory of the Pan Handle part of the state where cotton acreage increase has been greatest.

The Texas agricultural experiment station has just issued a bulletin entitled "Large-Scale Cotton Production in Texas," in which the cost records of a number of typical large-scale farming operations are compared with typical farms operated in the ordinary way.

In the summary of the bulletin a comparison is made of the cost of growing cotton on 200 acres where tractor power and other labor-saving devices are used, and of the cost on 200 acres operated by horse power with the usual tools. The results show that there was a saving of $571.66 in favor of the area operated with tractor and other labor-saving machinery.

It is with tractors, gang plows, two-row cultivators and similar machinery that more cotton per man can be grown, thus reducing labor cost.

I RECKON SO

BY E. B. ALEXANDER.

THE DIARY OF A SOUTHERN PEYPS.

Sunday (Lord's Day). This day do D. Peyps take a fall from his horse and come into the house crying, but I told him he was like His Highness, the Prince of Wales, which left him mightily content. But presently his wrist pained him, and I sent for a chiropractor and leech who bound up his wound and bethought himself to bleed him, but decided he was not in need of leeching.

Presently to the customs for my chits with Peyps Junior on Mr. Arkwright's stage coach run through the streets of the city by electricity. Peyps did say to the conductor: "Thanks for the buggy ride; had a nice time," which did throw the stage coach into a sound and made all the passengers laugh, the smartest child in all the kingdom, I do declare!

At length to church to hear a Wesleyan expound the Scriptures, the dullest sermon I have heard since the Reformation, but mightily joyed to see a pretty baggage in the gallery of the church-house, and took great delight in singing the psalm called One Hundred.

Presently home where I dined on a chine of roast beef, very tasty, and a beaker of buttered ale, which I have not drunk for breakfast in a fortnight. Fell to reading Mr. Mason's new book, "The Lure of the Great Smokies," where, God willing, I had as lief be during the hot weather. Also took great pleasure in a cartoon in a public print by Mr. J. Alley, the limner. So to bed.

Monday. Up betimes and took the soiled linens to the washer-woman and to the office for my daily staff, but Lord! I would as lief be rich with great landed estates like the gentry and a new petrol coach to go 90 miles an hour and a new collar for the shoe-dog. This day also did I cast my accounts and find myself about even with the world, owing as many tradespeople, such as the victualers and the provisioners, as I do to owe.

Presently I to a chop house with the other scriveners and we resolved to enter the Coca-Cola contest and win 2,000 pounds sterling. God willing, with which I could re-fill the empty wine casks in the basement of Bankrupt Court manor house, where the Peyps lodge. A wrangling over the reckoning, so I paid the waiter.

So home, the weather being foul and I vexed to the blood by a bad cold, and fell to reading in Mr. Wright's new book called "God and the Groceryman," which is to me the greatest drive in the world, so that I would scratch the author to death and take oath that he died of the itch, as the yokels do say in Alabama. So to bed.

Tuesday. Up betimes and spent the day in fasting and prayer because of the bad cold, but it was not better one whit at a candle-light so took a great draught of strong rum and felt better. To sup with my cock-zen and found her sat down to dinner which was very good; only the venison pastry was palatable mutton, which was not handsome. Admirable discourse until 9 at night and then home and to bed, taking a cup of ale for my cold.

Wednesday. Dr. Edwin Mims, the author, do call me over the telephone contrivance and we walked in the park, a most learned gentleman whom I esteem highly, he telling me of his visit to California and how he was at a dinner where Will Rogers, the comique, was to preside, but was stricken with illness and had to be cut of the stone, so Dr. Mims did take his place and 'twas right conical.

Thursday. I rose by candle and spent my time fiddling until time to go to the office, but the shod-dog howl under the casement whenever I iddle especially on Mr. Vagabond's music, the dog which left the lace-Lorraine, although called a German herself, so that presently I desisted and broke my fast on sausages and coffee, good to the last drop, as Mr. Check do say.

In the evening to a playhouse to see a cinema, but Lord, what poor things they are since W. Hart O. Chaplin quit. But the news is that Mr. Chaplin hath settled with his wife and may again play for the cinema.

Home by petrol coach and Peyps Junior do cry so loud that I was of a full mind to baste him with a switch, but he got under the bed and played his musical chair, thus filling the night with little tinklings. I gave him a flagon of sweet milk and fell to reading in a book called "Up From Slavery" by Booker Washington, which Sir Julius Rosenwald, the merchant, hath lately sent me from Chicago, chiding me that I had never read it. I did not know Washington was born in Virginia,shire rather than of Alabama,shire, as I had thought. So to bed.

Friday. This day was I almost clapped up by the watch for parking wrong, but bought tickets for the peypters and left him with the constabulary right well content, cost me eight shillings.

At candle-light to an ale house, where we had good music and a great deal of wine. I very merrie. Went to bed; my head aching all night, but I laid it to the barrel of one of the dish of anchovies rather than the wine, but my wife, poor wretch, is in a pet and do declare me to be foxed. God forbid!

Just in Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON.

It is hardly conceivable that Paul Redfern is lost. All night long, from the shades of Saturday evening until the dawn of Sunday, with other personal friends of the intrepid young aviator, an earnest vigil was kept.

He should have landed at Rio before 6 o'clock Saturday, our standard eastern time. But when the hour came there was no news of Paul.

Even before that hour he had become apprehensive. He told me personally as I talked to him in detail—shortly before the hop-off of his long and perilous voyage by air, that he would send up flames from the shores of the Amazon as to whether—according to fuel supply left—he would proceed across the jungles to Rio, or turn toward Para, or Pernambuco.

When the flames failed of record, although the sleepless eyes of two continents waited in a blending of hope and anguish to record them, there was a sinking in the hearts of all—a disappointment that had no good excuse to extenuate.

Then—even then—we almost knew, in spite of our hopes, that Paul had met his Waterloo—a brave, daring young American who flew into the jaws of an almost certain death in the interest of the greater science of modern times.

It is not proper here to indulge in any words of censure—He believed he could make it—From the shores of Brunswick's Glynn Isle beach to the landing field in Rio de Janeiro, a distance of 4,600 miles across sea and jungle—

And the most perilous trip by air ever conceived. The Brunswick committee, acting for the financial backers of the expedition, believed he could make it. He personally was full of confidence.

He flew the giant Stinson monoplane from Detroit to Brunswick on schedule time. He landed as gracefully as a bird. The plaudits were echoed around the world.

And his mastery of the science of aviation was regarded as immutable evidence that he could reach the final goal of his ambition without accident or scar.

But the vicissitudes and peculiarities of southern elements were perhaps not taken into such serious account as necessary.

In the waters south of the Florida peninsula—at this season of the year, particularly—an atmospheric disturbance is as likely as a sudden cloud flake over the shining sun or moon—

—And this is what probably happened to Paul Redfern. Winging his way to the South American coast, across the Caribbean—the sea of myth and mystery—he ran, in all reason, into a tropical storm that tossed his ship into an angle that a great and powerful motor could not control, and then—

O, the horror of such an expedition until the science of long-distance aviation has been more completely developed!

In all of my long experience in dealing with people, or with human affairs, I have never seen or known of a greater courage, concentrated into 120 pounds of flesh, than in young Paul Redfern.

With him it was not a spirit of the "dare-devil." He was thoughtful. The son of a minister, the president of Benedict college in South Carolina, educated, refined, retiring, and yet filled with the impulsive spirit of true American youth, he yielded to ambition.

From the earliest days of his young manhood he thought, and dreamed of flying.

THE PSYCHIC FACTOR IN DIGESTION.

The longer I practice medicine and the more I am aware of my mistakes, the more I am convinced that the patient is the key to the cure, and the more willing I am to believe that he is spending his time and good money for the fun of telling his troubles. There are doubtless some who like to do this, but even they are not normal, and we should be sorry for them and ready to smile with them at some of the things they do, instead of being incensed or contemptuous.

These are not my sentiments. Indeed not. Readers may detect this at once. I quote that first paragraph from a recent paper by Dr. Walter C. Alvarez on "Treatment of Nervous Indigestion."

Nervous readers will recall that I have definitely and didactically asserted time and again that there is no such thing as nervous indigestion. I may be 2 per cent wrong about that, indeed I have always feared so, or rather I have always feared some mean doctor would out me on the small margin of error in my arbitrary assertion, but even so, I leave it to any teacher who knows anything about instructing the laity, have I taught wisely?

Look at the present attitude and practice of the laity in relation to alleged "nervous indigestion." The dictum of the public health directors that common respiratory infections, which they assure us are responsible for about four-fifths of all illnesses, physicians attend, are preventable by reasonable care, and then tell me, wouldn't a little less vagueness, a little more definite statement of the part of the public health authorities, be a great blessing to the happiness of our people?

Dr. Alvarez is a thorough authority in the field of gastrointestinal diseases. He ought to know his onions. Dr. Alvarez definitely and didactically excludes the recurrent hiccups from the smooth diet he recommends to patients with temperamental indigestion. I shall quote from Dr. Alvarez's paper the essentials of his smooth diet in another issue. Here I want to glean some of the pertinent thoughts from this very practical paper, for the benefit of readers who still insist they have nervous indigestion, and remind the patient that digestion can doubtless be upset in sensitive persons by strong emotions, fatigue, improper methods of eating or constipation.

"First be sure of your patient's neurotic before you begin to treat him; for it is not sufficient to say, 'Eat something else besides nerves.' When one sees how often the skilled gastroenterologist with every form of technical assistance at his command, makes the mistake of treating as a 'neurotic' some one who has gallstones, or the cord, incipient tuberculosis, or cancer, or some other organic disease. In fact, years of suffering from organic disease is often the cause of the very neuroticism that excites our distrust."

"Our fondness for calling patients unpleasant names such as 'neurotic' and 'hysterical' is a mistake. 'One of the best ways of preparing for this work (that is, treating patients with nervous indigestion) is to have a nervous breakdown oneself, but not every one can do this.'"

"Family rows should be held away from the table." "I am against prescribing the newer synthetic sleep producing drugs for 20 years and have yet to see an habitué in my own practice."

And then let us see to it that the government puts an immediate regulation upon all flying that is particularly fraught with hazard.

O! for the truth! And that means knowledge and enlightenment and a lighted path, divorced from the darkness of recklessness. We do we all remember that famous and yet peculiar novel by the late Rider Haggard, entitled "She?"

"She who must be obeyed." We remember the weird description of the landing of the English travelers on the savage coast of Africa; how they found, embedded in the mud, the ancient stone wharf; how they toilfully made their way up the long river, labored through the long-forgotten canal and across the morass.

We remember the description of the City of Kor, and we especially recall the picture of the deserted and crumbling Temple of Truth. Within its inner court stood a statue of the goddess whose worshippers had once filled that waste with their hurrying footsteps, and whose voices had once filled that silence with sounds of devotion.

We remember that upon a pedestal stood a magnificent marble globe, and upon this globe stood a sculptor's dream of female loveliness. Its hands were extended in supplication. A veil was over its face. Divine among the deities! Silenced while it illuminated every outline!

And now, as a final word, may the good judgment of the American government lift the veil of doubt, and restore to the great science of aviation its rightful place in a nation's advancement without a needless sacrifice of human lives.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

How Our Waste Can Do Mercy Work Through the Salvation Army.

While supplying a foremost pulp in London in 1909 I had the honor and pleasure of becoming personally acquainted with General William Booth, the venerable concealer and organizer of the Salvation Army, that now has the world at large as its field of operations.

He was the most interesting and impressive character I have ever met. He had the stature and carriage of a soldier, the piercing eyes of a commander and the peculiar type of his that indicates a conqueror.

From his lips I heard the vivid and blood-quicken story of his early missionary labors in English towns and ports, his tours and evangelistic work in the farthest corners of the world, the oppositions and persecutions, and hardships that he had endured. By short degrees and small increments he gathered a following of heroic hearts, born of man, and slums, and skepticism, until there blossomed in his hand the banner of "Booth and Fire." It became the oriflamme of the world's greatest and most consecrated host of Christian soldiers famous in all three regions—heaven and earth and hell!

A World Challenging Decision. When William Booth conceived the plan and mission of the Salvation Army he was down to earth in his decision, thinking and praying over the dry bones of the defunct evangelism that had followed so strongly and long on the Western world, and revival in England there, in secret communion with the Holy Spirit, he reached his decision that "these bones must live again."

That decision flamed at once into public action and today is pulsing with increasing power in every corner of the globe. Utilizing an observation made during his missionary labors in India, when he sensed the psychic effect of the crucifixion, he concentrated and communized the minds and spirits of a miscellaneous crowd, General Booth introduced tambourines and other musical instruments into the open-air exercises of his army. He explained to me that attractive practice that music gives to the army operation and that it has been in getting the gospel message over to any curious and cold-minded crowd that stands round about the big brass band which he called the "boogie-woogie" and the "boogie-woogie" comes the humble pulp of the pavement.

An army must have a uniform, so he devised a simple and striking apparel that distinguished the Salvation Army from all other services. And then it must have an ensign to which the people may flock and which they may elect to follow, and so came forth from General Booth's fertile brain the "Banner of Blood."

Two lady photographers prevailed upon the author to have his likeness taken. When they tried to sell the photographs, the ladies discovered that they were not the only ones who possessed the pictures. They were taken by others as well. They claimed that they had been granted the monopoly of the pictures. The ladies, therefore, sued him for damages. The author appeared in court, stating that he had never made any contract with the ladies, but had merely consented to their request that he should sit. The verdict is still in suspense.

D'Annunzio. Preparations are already on foot for the breaking in September of the closure of the Vittoriano, within which the Commander Gabriele D'Annunzio, precursor of modern lives a life of artistic and political retirement. For this solemn occasion a performance is to be given by an all-star cast of D'Annunzio's dramatic troupe, "The Daughter of Jorio," and already the poet and Signor Forzano, the regisseur of the Scala theater, are devoting day and night to the details of the production. The tragedy will be played in the garden of the villa on two stages, and the whole will be set while another is being acted. The whole natural conformation of the garden is to be utilized to enhance the effect of the performance. The flight of the protagonist from her persecutors in the first act, and the procession leading Aligi, the mystic shepherd and his flock, to his brother's farewell on his way to execution, the exigencies of our ordinary theater require to be enacted "off" will be visible to the spectators while the action of the piece proceeds on the stage. Only 500 spectators will be privileged to witness this remarkable performance, and the payment of 1,000 lire each. The proceeds will be devoted to the construction of a new bridge over the Tiber, which D'Annunzio has announced his intention of presenting to the nation. The price is perhaps not excessive when we remember that ticketholders will be enabled to see the mysterious decorations with which "The Commander" has adorned his villa, and the extraordinary costumes which he collected in the garden.

Holds Two Parties To Be Solution of State's Troubles

Editor Constitution: The best interests of Georgia cry out for and demand another political party and for disinterested leadership. Thinking people over the state must be possessed with a feeling of sickening disgust when they contemplate the present political situation; a stalemate before the governor and the senate; an impotent legislature that knows not what it wants, or how to get it. Witness the resolution of the senate asking the governor what it must do to be saved when the members wouldn't do it if he told them; the inability to pass a bill of sickening character, in fact, to block any constructive measures in conflict with private interests. They say you can't indict a whole people, or perhaps a whole state—yes, but it has been done. The present situation shows the impotence of the people as a whole to legislate for their own best interests. We have it not in our hearts to censure the Hon. Seaborn Wright for taking his hat and going home for one of the best bills for the good of Georgia that has been presented in years, to wit: a bill to revise the criminal procedure of Georgia.

In general terms was its ultimate object. Why not the Georgia party, as a new party dedicated to the best interests of Georgia, and to the special interests of none? I am not very hopeful, but just suggest it. If for no other reason, let it be organized, and let it be organized. There may be more than two parties in Georgia. That is our main need—two parties, each with platforms and promises, each with a leader, each with party candidates. Then an elected representative would stand for something and be bound by it. Such is not the case of the Georgia party. It is a plea, do as they please, or do nothing as they please.

The situation cries out for unselfish leaders, not demagogues if you please, but real leaders who have the best interests of Georgia at heart. Of course, there are many good men in the legislature now, and this is not an attack on any one of them, but this is an attack and a protest against their impotence as a whole, which is the result of a bad system, and shows the need of two political parties in this state, parties that know where they are going so that Georgia may be going on her way towards better days.

Is this too much to expect from our public men?

HELPING UNCLE SAM LIVE

BY SAM W. SMALL

What Georgians Paid Last Year To Keep Uncle Sam Solvent.

Some quite interesting facts are revealed in the report by Commissioner David H. Blair, of the United States Internal Revenue collections for the fiscal year ending June 30, of this year.

The preliminary summary released for publication this morning is here-with annotated for the information of readers of The Constitution.

The total collections for 1927 were $2,965,083,129.11, showing an increase over 1926 of $20,683,257.72.

The corporation tax for the first half of 1927 was at the old rate of 13 per cent, but for the latter half year was at the new rate of 15.5 per cent, giving a total increase for the year from that source of $213,032,708.73.

The normal tax on individual incomes was 1.5 per cent on the first $4,000 of net income, 3 per cent on the next $4,000 and 5 per cent on all over $8,000, as compared with rates of 2, 4 and 6 per cent under the previous law.

There was a surtax on net incomes, ranging from 1 per cent on those above $10,000 to a maximum of 20 per cent on net incomes in excess of $100,000.

The exemption for a single person was raised from $1,000 to $1,500 and for a married person living with husband or wife the exemption was hiked from $2,500 to $3,500.

How Georgia Coughed Up.

From the Georgia district collector Josiah Rose reported total receipts of $14,277,050.20, which was only $45,533.10 more than was collected in 1926, that small increase was less than one-half of one per cent, and is pretty good evidence that our Georgians took full advantage of all our reductions and exemptions.

Alabama, on the other hand, increased her payments by 16 per cent; Virginia by 30 per cent; North Carolina by 7 per cent; Tennessee, first Texas and Florida by 3 per cent each. Mississippi fell off from the previous year by 13 per cent and South Carolina by 17 per cent.

It is difficult to locate the causes of these vacillating figures from our southern territory.

The income taxes from Georgia were $13,698,061.49 and miscellaneous taxes were $578,988.71, making up the total of $14,277,050.20.

Of these income taxes the corporations doing business in the state paid upon their net incomes $9,545,826.12 and individual taxpayers chipped in $4,112,253.37. The increase of net income tax payments in this state in 1927 was 10 per cent of the total in 1926.

An analysis of the returns indicates that Georgia really advanced last fiscal year in both corporation and individual gains of net incomes to the extent of 10 per cent, after allowing for the large reduction of rates and enlargement of exemptions, but no one could make those dominions in the legislature believe it.

Evil Spirits Still Abroad.

Some persons, including ex-Commissioner Upshaw, have been propagating the fiction that we have "prohibition" in this fair land of ours. But Brother Blair tells us that for the year to this last June 30, he collected from distilled spirits, non-beverage when released, $18,756,702.82.

And his agents have reported that a huge number of evil spirits became bootleg beverage stuff almost immediately after being turned loose. He also got $16,419.45 from rectified spirits or wines, $755,992.83 from still or sparkling wines, and $400,792.12 from grape brandy used to fortify sweet wines.

There also also got $203.88 more from special taxes on brewers and malt liquor dealers in 1927 than in 1926, which leads one to ask "How come?"

Just Watch Our Smoke!

We are giving up our strong cigars, for the taxes paid on them in 1927 were $14,714,041.58 less than in 1926, but we didn't abate our production of smoke. We turned on cigarettes and collected $24,103,753.62 more taxes from small coffin-like bags than we did in 1926. The total tax from cigarettes and "the makings" was $280,185,581.57, and the number of cigarettes manufactured and taxed was 92,085,584,782, which figures out at 700 for each man, woman and child in the nation. But, for pity's sake, don't mention it to good old Dr. Kress, of the W. C. T. U., now in convention in Minneapolis!

There is a general notion in the sophisticated circles of the land that "dipping snuff" has increased. We collected $151,993 pounds—take it from the records, pounds—of manufactured snuff. The amount of taxes on that snuff was $8,007,004.64.

That is not a small sum to sneeze at. I'll tell a watery-eyed world!

And just as a heartener for my good old chum, Dr. Horace Grant, president of the National Order of Pipe Smokers, let it be known that Uncle Sam collected last year something near $40,000 in taxes upon the pipes of the far-flung order.

Our Other Luxury Tithes.

We recruited our clubbiness by paying $302,182.40 more club dues in 1927 than in the year before, and I imagine the increase of bridge clubs accounts for the fact that we paid $4,742,468.50 in taxes on playing cards, or an increase of 1926 of $529,054.47. Whose play is it, now?

Bowling alleys and billiards and pool tables paid $1,714,659.86 in special taxes to enable a lot of "dipping snuff" walk five miles around the table after supper.

But ain't it glorious that we Americans have got the dough to pay for those taxes and still smile at the collector!

CLOUDS TO CHECK TEMPERATURE RISE IN ATLANTA TODAY

Scattered clouds and moderate temperatures are today's weather, according to Atlanta and vicinity, according to the official forecast from the Washington meteorological bureau. Thunder showers are expected to ensue Tuesday, but the reports state:

The thermometer, which Sunday registered a minimum of 56 degrees, with a high level of 78 degrees, is predicted to record a similar range of temperatures today.

While Atlantans early Sunday morning were again reaching for the extra blanket that has served in good stead on several occasions this month, the low ebb reached by the mercury column Sunday was not the record minimum for August. Points several degrees lower have been witnessed on previous mornings. However, the mean temperature of the day was rather low, in spite of the bright sun visible most of the day.

The tendency toward a return to high temperatures will be checked temporarily by the moisture-laden skies predicted for today and the precipitation scheduled for Tuesday.

MRS. J. J. WILKINS DIES AT SUNNYSIDE

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Mrs. J. J. Wilkins, 79, died Friday at the home of her son in Sunnyside. She is survived by her husband, J. J. Wilkins; by one son, V. D. 10,000 ATTEND PROTEST IN SQUARE.

London, August 28.—(AP)—Ten thousand persons this afternoon attended a demonstration in Trafalgar Square protesting against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' federation of Great Britain, in shirt sleeves and vest but minus his collar, was the principal speaker. He declared "The Statute of Liberty has become the monument of murder."

In the course of the proceedings a man mounted the plinth of the Nelson memorial column and unfurled an American flag with the intention of pouring kerosene over it and burning it. Officials of the international class war prisoners' aid remonstrated and urged him to desist. He climbed down, but others seized the flag and tore it to shreds.

Cook in his address said the British press had set itself on the Sacco-Vanzetti incident as a means of stirring up anti-American sentiment. Commenting on Russia, Cook declared Britain is arming for war against the Soviet. He cited the Salisbury plain maneuvers, now in progress, as an example of that preparation, but said a labor revolution would prevent the success of such a war. A labor army composed of former service men now is forming in Great Britain, he de-

SAVANNAH-TYBEE. A dip in the Atlantic would be delightful this week-end. Tybee can be reached on a free road all the way to the breakers. Hotel accommodations can be had on the island, or, if one prefers to vary the program a bit, the Savannah or DeSoto, in Savannah, may be used for headquarters, permitting a picture in the evening, or a delightful evening drive on the paved roads of Chatham county.

The Constitution's Atlantic Beach Motorist will direct you every mile of the way, over either of the three routes. The one through Macon and Statesboro seems to be the most popular with those who have been taking this pleasant week-end trip during the past several weeks. It's an easy one-day drive each way, or at least it was easy in the Falcon-Knight pathfinder.

This and three other motorist folders have just been compiled by driving all routes with the Constitution's new Falcon-Knight pathfinder cars, equipped with special Stewart-Warner speedometers geared to the front wheels.

SACCO AND VANZETTI BODIES ARE CREMATED

ers entered silently and took their seats. A few women shed tears, but the majority sat in silence. Miss Donovan walked to the rostrum and, in a steady voice, marked only once by an emotional break, began reading from two sheets of paper.

"Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti," she spoke, "you came to America seeking freedom. In the strong idealism of youth you came as workers fighting for the liberty and equality of opportunity heralded as the particular gift of this country to all newcomers. You entered your labors in Massachusetts, the very birthplace of American ideals. And now Massachusetts and America have killed you—murdered you because you were anarchists."

"A hundred and fifty years ago the controlling people of this state hanged and burned women in Salem, charging them with witchcraft. The shame of those old acts of barbarism can never be wiped out. But they are as nothing beside this murder which modern Massachusetts has committed upon you. The witch-burners were motivated by the superstitions fear of an emotional religion. Their minds were blinded by their selfish passion to reach heaven."

Execution Assailed.

"The minds of those who have killed you are not blinded. They have committed this act in deliberate cold blood. For more than seven years they have every chance to know the truth about you. Not once did they even dare question the quality of your characters, a quality so noble and shining that millions have come to be guided by it. They refused to look. They accepted the blithe prejudices of class position and self-interest to close their eyes. They cared more for wealth, comfort and institutions than they did for the crassest plutocracy of the world as known since ancient Rome."

"Your execution is one of the blackest crimes in the history of mankind. It is that and more. A horrible enormity it would be if the killing of you had been ordered by the political and material powers alone. How much more horrible it is to have this act sanctioned and even blessed by those who pass among us as the leaders of intellectual and spiritual power. The blatant enulations with which they adorned in your death is the final sign that the act of killing you was the act of vengeance of one class—the class dominated by the worship of money and position—against you as symbols of another class—the workers and all others aspiring to realize the true meaning of life."

"Will Fight and Conquer."

"Your long years of torture and your last hours of supreme agony are the living banner under which we and our descendants for generations to come will march to accomplish that better world based on the brotherhood of man for which you died. In your martyrdom we will fight on and conquer."

Then her voice broke. Pointing to a red band which she wore on her right wrist, she slowly spoke the words that were printed on it in black: "Remember—Justice Crucified—Aug. 23, 1927."

She stepped down and took her seat as attendants of the crematorium prepared to place the caskets in the vaults to the side of the chapel in which they were to be burned. Within five minutes the caskets had been rolled behind the metal doors of the cremating vaults and the process of cremation started. Miss Donovan, Fearnot and Jackson were allowed to look through a small glass-covered hole into the vaults.

Meanwhile the procession which had started to follow the hearse and automobiles and which had been checked by police arrived at the cemetery. From a crowd estimated at more than 200 persons, it was decided to 200 persons. The drizzle also had turned into a steady rain, but this did not prevent a large crowd of curious persons from standing around the cemetery. Hundreds of automobiles congregated in the vicinity. Traffic was tied up for several blocks around. The cemetery itself was barred to the crowd, which was held in check by police.

NORTHERN REVERSES IN CHINA REPORTED

Shanghai, August 28.—(United News.)—There is no confirmation here of reports that Nanking has fallen before the attack of northern troops. On the contrary, it is reported that the Chinese army is now in the vicinity of Nanking, and that the northern troops are being driven back.

In a clash at Nanking today, it is reported that the nationalists were victorious and that the northern troops were driven back.

4 ENGINE HOUSES BURNED BY REDS

TWO ENGINE HOUSES ARE SET ON FIRE.

Cambridge, Mass., August 28.—(AP)—Two fire engine houses were set on fire here this afternoon while the apparatus was busy at a blaze of incendiary origin in the city.

Branding all five fires as the work of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, police Chief Edward McBride ordered a police guard on every fire house.

Decoy Fire Starts.

The "decoy" fire started in a pile of oil-soaked rags in a deserted barn shortly after 2 o'clock. Forty minutes later engine company No. 3 returned to quarters to find their two-story brick building a mass of flames.

The reason for the blaze after most of the floors and interior furnishings had been destroyed. An investigation disclosed three smoking bundles of oil-soaked rags and several bundles of blazing newspapers in the place.

While the engine company was fighting their fire the crew of ladder company No. 2 returned from the barn fire to find the basement of their quarters blazing. A barrel filled with blazing rags in the center of the floor told how the flames had started.

While most of the East Cambridge apparatus was "mopping up" at the two engine house fires, almost simultaneously explosions set fire to the Ohio Chemical Manufacturing company and the Anchor Welding company. The companies are a quarter of a mile apart.

Oil-Soaked Rubbish.

Piles of oil-soaked rubbish in the office and storeroom of the chemical company plant started the fire there, while similar torches, piled under oxygen tanks were responsible for the blaze in the welding company building. These oxygen tanks at the chemical plant exploded, but firemen fought through dense clouds of smoke to keep the flames away from large stores of nitrous oxide, oxygen and ether.

Both fires were extinguished quickly. The police estimated the damage at $5,000.

CAMPUS OF COLLEGE SCENE OF BOMBING.

Berkeley, Calif., August 28.—(United News.)—A bomb, exploded at the entrance to the bacteriology building on the University of California campus tonight, wrecked the door and front portal of that structure, and broke windows in a number of nearby university buildings.

The building was unoccupied at the time. A number of students carried on experimental work in the frame structure earlier in the day, but had left at dark.

A tin can filled with black powder and earth, and ignited by a fuse, was the bomb used, Berkeley police said.

D. S. Fox, a medical student, living across the street, ran to the building after the explosion and was confident that no one was in there. He found the bomb remnants.

Police have no idea as to the motive behind the bombing.

THIRD DYNAMITING IN THREE WEEKS REPORTED SUNDAY

The third dynamiting of homes in the Simpson street section within the past three weeks occurred late Sunday night in a vacant house at 339 Elm street, just around the corner from the place of the earlier explosions. It was revealed in police reports.

According to Police Lieutenants Weaver and Hudson, who investigated the explosion, a charge of dynamite apparently placed in the fireplace on the left side of the house from the entrance was discharged by a bullet fired through the window of the house from across the street. A window shade torn down by the blast revealed a bullet hole, the officers said.

The explosion took place about 11 o'clock Sunday night. The family of Mrs. Elizabeth Butler, who formerly occupied the house had moved out Saturday.

The wife of Mose Lindley, negro, in whose yard at 637 Simpson street, one of the explosions occurring three weeks ago last Thursday took place, told investigating officers she had seen two men on the premises of the Elm street house about 8 o'clock Sunday night. The explosion badly wrecked the interior of one side of the dwelling and blew fragments of glass into the yard next door.

The other dwelling which figured in the earlier dynamitings was at Simpson and Griffin streets, all in the same locality. Lindley, police were told, had placed a for sale sign on his property, claiming that he wanted to sell the house and move away from the neighborhood.

ed in everything on the way back but especially in the irrigated districts around Harbin and Peking. He has seen the waters forming in the mountain sheds; had watched them grow into a river, had seen the river impounded and harnessed in a lake and now saw the bare sage-brush land, the old brown desert where Buffalo Bill lived, turned into a scene of harvest time.

Across the sunset field and stacks of wheat, homes and orchards, he looked at the bleak hill where the white crosses, row and row, mark the graves of Custer's 300, who were killed in the battle of the Little Big Horn in the days when the settlers were west. The blood-soaked soil of this irrigation now produces sugar beets, alfalfa, hay, potatoes, beans, butter, chickens, turkey and even a great crop. The descendants of the warriors are farmers; Custer did not die in vain.

The president showed an unusual affability on the eastern journey toward the crowds that assembled at the stations. He talked with people and leaned over the rail of his car to reach for hands. He made inquiries about the wheat and other crops. It is considered probable that the president now that he has declared he will not be a candidate, will speak his mind, the fruit of his summer thoughts, on the subject of agricultural problems, during his stop at Brookings, S. D., on his way home to Washington.

Big Welcome Awaits Bob Jones Upon Return Home Today

All Atlanta To Turn Out For Champion

Jones and Party Arrive at Terminal Station This Morning at 8:20.

BY BEN COTHMAN.

Bob Jones, the national amateur champion, comes home today. Bob Jones has come home before, victorious, from bigger tournaments.

But never has Bob Jones come home from a tournament with such a record as he has from the hills and dales of Minikahda last week while playing superb golf in winning his third amateur championship.

Bob, the big Moore-Havemeyer trophy, Bob's family, a bunch of friends and newspapermen will arrive this morning at the Terminal station at 8:20.

And what a welcome they're going to get.

It won't be just golf enthusiasts at the station. It'll be Atlanta—turning out to greet its favorite son and the greatest golfer in the world.

The welcome will follow the same formal lines that it has on other occasions. Bob Jones has come home from a golfing war with a fresh scalp at his belt.

At Bob's own request, the Atlanta Athletic club, his own, will not even have a committee at the station to greet him. That's Bob's way. He just wants to get home.

The Atlanta golfer certainly has set a record in his work at Minikahda during the past week. Only three times during the entire week of tournament play, did he lose a hole, never weakening for an instant.

He is truly the Iron Duke of golf, as someone has christened him. And the very likely that when Bob Jones fades from the picture in years to come, he'll never be any one that can quite fill his shoes.

But Atlanta isn't thinking so much of that morning. Atlanta's going to be down at the Terminal station greeting Bob Jones.

Atlanta Party Headed Home

BY WHITTAKER CARY, Staff Correspondent.

On Board the Georgia, the Bacon is being brought to Atlanta.

That phrase is becoming hackneyed whenever Bobby Jones returns from a golfing expedition, but it is one whose joy brings qualities make up for its worn-out use. The spoils of war that Bobby Jones brings home consist of the intangible amateur golf championship and the very handsome and expensive Moore-Havemeyer cup, which presses in most forceful and tangible manner the winning of that championship.

This magnificent trophy is made of 18-carat gold, stands 10 inches high and is valued at $15,000, which gives some slight idea of its worldly worth.

It is no wonder that Chick Ridley, who was appointed by Bobby as official guardian of the trophy, can hardly sleep at night or by day so great is his concern over it. The cup and case must weigh close to 75 pounds and although Chick is a tired citizen since galloping over the hills and dales of Minikahda, he won't allow even the ebullient hued barons of Mr. Pullman's service to carry it a few feet. The Atlanta party, which consists of Bobby and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones, Mrs. Charles Freeman, Tom Paine, Watts Gunn, Jack DeLander, Chick Ridley, and the writer, left Minneapolis at 8 o'clock Saturday night, arrived in Chicago at 8:50 this morning and in the Big Four and Southern railway station they will land at the Terminal at Atlanta about 8:30 Monday morning.

All members of the party are in good shape, are loud in their praise of the wonderful way in which the people of Minneapolis ran the tournament and the hospitality of the northwestern citizens.

Barons Show Way to Pack As End Nears

Birmingham Rout Pels From Top Place in Last Series.

Memphis, Tenn., August 28.—(AP)—

What was considered the most crucial series in the Southern Association ended today between Birmingham and New Orleans, when the Pelicans took the last and only game from the Barons.

The Pelicans made one run in the series but piled up a commanding advantage.

The Barons made more runs today against the Barons than they had in the past week combined.

Birmingham won five, tied one and lost one, with the Pelicans in the long series.

The Barons lost only one game during the week out of eight played, winning six. On the other hand, New Orleans played seven, all with the Barons, with disastrous results.

Vois Close Behind.

Nashville, the best behind the Barons for five and lost one. Memphis, starting another important series in the week, won five, tied one and lost one, with the Pelicans in the long series.

FAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS.

Bobby and His Work.

Julius Caesar Jones is coming home again and that means but one thing. It means that Atlanta's little human billboard will face a legion of friends and admirers and a battery of cameras at Terminal station today when he comes back to Dixie.

We heard an interesting conversation the other day between two business men who evidently are among the five in Atlanta who do not play golf. Saboteurs, "It makes me sick the way people turn out and hurrah about this Bobby Jones."

Said the other one, with a smirk, "Yeah, what's he ever done besides win a golf title or two?"

As stated above these two men are interested in the business of this city and judging from their conversation they are cold-blooded business men with little of sentiment in their makeup. Very well, they can't see beyond the ends of their wrinkled noses or they could see something about "this Bobby Jones" which is of inestimable benefit to them in a BUSINESS WAY.

The thousands who greet Bob Jones this morning will not be thinking of the service he is doing the city. They will be there with their cheers and tributes for Bob Jones the man but that does not alter the fact that Bob Jones is doing more to ADVERTISE Atlanta every day than possibly could be completed through the medium of paid space publicity.

The next time you take a trip into a strange state you will get into conversation with some individual sitting in the hotel lobby and this is what you will hear: "Where did you say you were from?"

Said the other one, with a smirk, "Yeah, what's he ever done besides win a golf title or two?"

A college chum of ours whom we had not seen for five years dropped into our office the other day and in the course of our visit the conversation turned to Atlanta. He said, "I didn't know a thing about Atlanta until I came down into the chum of ours DOES NOT PLAY GOLF."

Yes, you may think it a commercial idea to expound but the truth is there, nevertheless, and if you are inclined to pool pooh all the hurrah that accompanies the return of the conquering Robert Tyne, just change your tune.

Those who know Bob Jones, the man, never think of this commercial angle. To us he is the object of the highest type of hero worship. He is the greatest golfer of all time and as fine a gentleman as ever lived and we will still give him our hurrahs if all the crabs in the universe rise up in chorus against it but still it goes against the grain to hear a business man deprecating the work of Atlanta's greatest advertiser.

State Tennis Tourney Reaches Third Round

First and second round matches were completed in the 1927 Georgia state tennis tournament at East Lake Sunday afternoon with only one upset taking place in the early rounds.

Close and hard-fought matches featured play in the opening rounds in which some very good matches were played. Billy Armstrong furnished the only upset of the tournament, defeating A. M. Kennedy, seeded player, 6-8, 6-4, 6-3, in one of the best matches of the early rounds.

Today will see in action such stars as Teddy Burwell, of Charlotte, one of the outstanding juniors of the south; Wilmer Hines, a 14-year-old youngster from Columbia, the best player ever seen in the south at that age; Maurice Bayon, and Clifford Sutter, the two young New Orleans stars; Lefty Bryan and John Thomas, of Chattanooga. This will be the first appearance of these youngsters in an Atlanta tournament.

Entries Close Today.

Entries in the men's doubles, junior and boys' singles will close today. Anyone wishing to enter should get in touch with Jack Moorey at Spalding Bros.

Following are the results of the first two rounds and pairings for today's matches:

First Round Matches.

Jack Moorey beat H. B. Van Allen, 6-0, 6-3.

Billy Dwyer beat G. D. G. of North Carolina, 6-1, 6-3.

W. B. Reese beat Allison Adams, 6-2, 6-3.

A. Rice beat George Meyer, of Mobile, 6-2, 6-3.

Jim Moorey beat William Lelie, 6-2, 6-3.

McLaughlin And Gardner Sent to Jail

Birmingham Loses First of Twin Bill to New Orleans.

by 25 to 16 Count Sunday.

New Orleans, August 28.—(AP)—

One Birmingham baseball player and one New Orleans fan were arrested for disturbing the peace here when Hollis McLaughlin, Birmingham pitcher, and Ray Gardner, New Orleans shortstop, were put out of the game for fighting today in the seventh inning of the first game of a scheduled double-header.

The prolonged game, taking four hours in the playing, caused the second contest to be called off on account of darkness.

The Birmingham ball player, Second Baseman Max Rosenfeld, was paroled on the charge of disturbing the peace after he was allowed to re-enter the game. The New Orleans fan, Emil Soudain, who rushed onto the field when the fight between Gardner and McLaughlin seemed imminent, was allowed to return to the grandstand, he also being paroled.

The scheduled double-header brought out the largest crowd of spectators ever known in New Orleans, some 20,000 persons being jammed into the stands and over-flowing on to the grounds. Police on several occasions were obliged to force back the horde as they approached too near the base lines.

Trouble started brewing in the seventh inning when Max Rosenfeld, on second base, claimed Joe Martina spiked him, while running bases. Difficulties between the two teams were brought near to a head when Gardner came to the bat in the same inning and was forced to throw himself to the ground to avoid being struck by the first ball hurled by Pitcher McLaughlin.

The second ball pitched by McLaughlin also was followed by abject dodging by Batter Gardner, who then advanced toward the pitcher with his bat in his hands. Gardner swung good at the bat at McLaughlin, who was saved from the blow by Captain Joseph Sonnenberg, of the New Orleans police, who received the blow on his right arm.

Rosenfeld then ran toward the scene of fracas but was intercepted en route by Fan Boston. An interchange of blows is said to have taken place before the pair were overpowered and taken to a police station. Manager Dobbs, of the Birmingham team, was obliged to go on with the game until the return of Rosenfeld, who, upon being paroled, came back into the game.

President John D. Martin of the Southern League, was a spectator at the game. He declined to make any statement. It was necessary for no reason to furnish Rosenfeld but he being released upon his own recognition.

Everybody Will Help Build Bobbie Jones Public Park

BY M. D. GLEASON.

Men and women in all walks of life in Atlanta and vicinity were interviewed during the past week and an expression obtained from them about the feasibility of everybody joining the Junior Chamber of Commerce in buying and laying out a large municipal recreation park to be named Bobbie Jones park as a token of esteem of his fellow Georgians for the world's greatest golfer. Without a dissenting voice everybody has pledged their support to this movement.

Everybody seems to concur with the Junior Chamber of Commerce's plan of letting everyone contribute as little as one dollar or as much as they will to the establishing of this park, the idea being that since Bobbie Jones, through his 11 years of constant remarkable golf playing, has brought such favorable notice to his home city and state that the most humble citizen should be given the opportunity to give his tribute to show his or her appreciation of Bobbie Jones for what he has done. The rich man can give $1,000 or more, if he will, and all the rest give as much as they think they can afford.

Never have we seen a movement so popular as this one, and everybody agrees that Georgia owes Bobbie some unusual recognition for the great amount of favorable notice he has brought to his home state, and a big public recreation park with an 18-hole golf course flanked by tennis courts, a lake for bathing, and perhaps a big stadium for other athletic sports, will be a monument to a great athlete that will be of great value to all and greater than a shaft of stone. Also it will be an inspiration to all future athletes.

The important fact, however, for all to remember is that while the world has seen many great athletes who have brought renown upon themselves and their home town, there is no living man that has kept his home city in the public prints and mind so favorably as Bobbie Jones. As an illustration, a Mr. A. B. Lee, official of the Maytag company, of Peachtree street, was in London a year ago last summer when Bobbie won his first British championship, and the Englishmen hearing Mr. Lee was also from Atlanta congratulated him and told him that Bobbie Jones was the best ambassador we could send to Great Britain.

We could not help asking Mr. Lee if the English thought so well of Bobbie then what must they think of him now, and especially as he showed himself the true sportsman and let the Scotsmen of St. Andrews keep for him that sacred cup prize so highly. Although Bobbie could have brought it back to Atlanta, he left it in the keeping of those who held it so highly.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is going at this matter in their business characteristic way and the executive committee will meet today and name a treasurer to receive funds and put other wheels in motion to make this big Bobbie Jones park a fitting tribute to valor and skill.

Knox Ever-Tite Flashing Lock Best of Its Kind

EDITED BY M. D. GLEASON

At the present time the R. F. Knox company sheet metal works occupies a large building at 576 Marietta street. This building, Mr. Knox built and equipped three years ago especially for his business, and at that time he thought he was erecting a building that would be large enough for all future needs.

Mr. Knox at the time, however, had not brought out the Knox-Ever-Tite flashing lock, now that architects and builders everywhere are learning the merits of this flashing lock, orders are beginning to come in from distant cities, and the R. F. Knox company will soon be needing more room.

The Knox-Ever-Tite flashing lock is the greatest time saver in putting on the watertight flashing ever put on the market. It consists of heavy sheet metal being bent in such shape that the bricklayer in laying brick in a wall or chimney can quickly fit a piece 8 inches or longer over the course of brick at the designated height the joining roof will be on the side wall or chimney, and go right along laying brick.

The bricklayer has done in less than a minute what takes the ordinary roofman the best part of an hour to do in endeavoring to chip out a small crack in the mortar and then to put under the present method he inserts the edge of his flashing tin to keep the roof from leaking.

Under the present methods there are times when the best mechanic even can not be positively sure that the roof will not leak at the place where it joins a brick or stone side wall.

TRINITY QUALITY COOPERATING WITH HOME-MAKERS

Trinity Quality Shop, Inc., located at 363 Boulevard, N. E., always has a decided increase in their business during the moving season and all indications point to 1934 as being no exception to the rule.

Anyone having furniture which needs repairing, refinishing or upholstering, realize that the time to have furniture done over is when they are changing houses or apartments. The furniture is taken from the old address and delivered back to the new one, thus saving the expense of the danger of damage to the furniture in a heavily loaded moving truck. Trinity Quality Shop has their own trucks and their own men, and they are well equipped in handling newly finished and upholstered furniture.

When a family moves to a new house or to a new apartment, they frequently change the color scheme for several of the rooms. An ivory bedroom suit is often changed to green or gray. This is done by removing the old finish first and then applying a new finish to suit the individual taste of the customer. By refinishing a dining room suit or a breakfast room suit in a new shade of mahogany, walnut or paint finish, the furniture comes back to the owner looking like new and in color to tone in with the walls or draperies. The core on the living room suit may be faded or worn but the Trinity Quality Shop takes care of this and gives it a new material to suit the customer, thus saving the price of a new suit. The finish and upholstering on wicker, cane, and fibre furniture may be changed to any color desired.

Trinity Quality Shop, Inc., employs about 30 skilled workmen in their different furniture repair departments and they also are well equipped with machinery necessary for the manufacture of any special article of furniture that might be required.

They also carry a large stock of antique furniture and reproductions for sale and anyone contemplating the purchase of a piece of antique furniture, bed chest of drawers, etc., would do well to look over their stock.

LITTLE GEORGIA PEANUT BECOMING VERY POPULAR

The Little Georgia peanut is fast becoming very popular all over the southern states, judging by the great quantities of them that are being shipped out of Atlanta every week.

We have several good companies here that have large plants where they shell, clean, sort and put these little Spanish-Georgia raised peanuts in the popular-price selling packages so familiar to everybody.

Among one of the busiest is the Barrett Food Products company, of 441 Marietta street, who puts up a brand known as "Farmer's Goodies." This brand is put up in a very attractive 5-cent package and C. O. Barrett, the proprietor, stated Saturday that through his distributors they are reaching nearly 40,000 stores in the south.

"The fact is," says Mr. Barrett, "we are to place a glass display jar in every drug store, soft drink stand and small stores in which we sold any fair amount of peanuts. When we checked up the long lists to be sent by our retailers, we were surprised to see that they totaled nearly 40,000. We ordered that many jars and most of them are now placed in all southern states from the Potomac to the Mississippi and the Little Georgia peanut is being sold from them."

This firm also makes great quantities of potato chips from every day and these are sold in the Atlanta and vicinity stores and soft drink stands. This firm employs a large force here in Atlanta and has a score of fast trucks leaving here every week for far and near points. Due to the care they take in presenting a neat package of clean, wholesome food product, their business shows a big increase every month.

"FRICK TRACTOR SPECIAL"

The Improved No. 00 Saw M'll

Yielding to the increasing demand for a low-priced practical mill suitable for the Fordson and larger tractors, we have designed and now offer for your consideration, our latest addition to the well-known FRICK line of machinery—The "TRACTOR SPECIAL." It is of light weight, strongly built, and moved from set to set with little labor and small expense. Where sets are small and moves are frequent, overhead expenses are up profits with the use of a large, cumbersome outfit. You can save the greater part of this expense by the use of the FRICK "TRACTOR SPECIAL."

FRICK COMPANY, Inc.

WAYNESBORO, PA. 61 SO. FORSYTH ST., ATLANTA, GA.

whereas with the Knox-Ever-Tite flashing lock, it is impossible to have a leak as the metal is here put in with the wall, bent the same width of the top of the brick and has an inside lip that turns up one-inch inside seam and outside flash extends out to make a perfect tight joint with the roof as the architect specifies.

This Knox-Ever-Tite flashing lock sheets will do two things that make it the most valuable thing ever put on a building to keep the water and snow and wind out of where the roof joins brickwork, and that enables the roofman on most any kind of roofing job to get hours' start in his first day on the job, and it is better than the old method of putting out the water at starting places.

While the Ever-Tite flashing lock is giving this firm much extra work at this time, it is also busy in the regular branches of sheet-metal work and have several jobs going on now in the Atlanta sector.

This firm also makes an exceptional good line of steam radiator covers and shields and are installing them in the homes and apartments of many Atlanta and Georgia people. These radiator shields soon pay for themselves in the saving of fuel and prevent heat, curtains, draperies, from going to the land of nod so often.

As ability, experience, skill, equipment and pleasing personality can be found under the roof of the R. F. Knox company's building, it will be well if every architect, builder and home owner in this section call or write them when they require anything made of sheet metal.

THIS IS ATLANTA'S BUSIEST MOVING WEEK OF YEAR

This morning Atlanta starts off its biggest moving week of the year and by the time the sun sets next Saturday many scores of families will be going home to a new location.

Moving nowadays is not the same dreaded task it used to be as the large moving and storage companies now have such large vans that they are capable of loading one or two of them up to capacity and come very near moving everything the average family has to move.

Due to careful methods of handling furniture by the Hawkins Transfer company they are making friends with many new people every week. This firm has experienced moving men who have been with them the past four or five years, and this company does not lose the job that is other than trustworthy.

Another thing about the Hawkins Transfer company is that they have very fair and most reasonable way of fixing the charges for each job. Their customers are always satisfied and tell their friends that Hawkins moved them for less than they thought it would cost.

To the families that are going to move Wednesday and Thursday it will be well for them to remember that they will be moving with families who will expect to move on these days also; and while all the moving companies will do their best, the wise thing to do is to move on Wednesday or tomorrow and make arrangements with the Hawkins Transfer and Storage company to move you in their quiet and efficient way.

STINSON DELIVERS SPECIAL SERMON

The Rev. Richard D. Stinson delivered a special moving sermon at the church rally at "Clipper temple, on West Fair street. He took for his text: "For ye are yet carnal; where as there among you envying, and strife, and divisions are, ye are not carnal and walk as men."

"If we would be of the greatest service to mankind and ourselves," the Rev. Stinson stated, "we must learn and know the ways of God. We would know how to do unto others as we would have them do unto us. The individuals and nations who have done most to make the world happy have been those who have helped in the largest measure by precept and example. The Christian religion is the greatest factor which has come to the world. Many of us fully realize this truth. Our people when sufficiently trained along proper lines will realize this truth."

"We are so far in advance today to what we were 35 years ago. And we will go on in this upward path if we can see the necessity and good judgment of keeping ourselves in harmony with the teachings of the Bible. We must not forget that He who shall have no other God before Me." Our children and our household must remember that God should be worshipped in spirit and in truth.

"The congested cities are the death knells of so many of us who might be in other places where we might be able to do the work it should do and to seek those things that the Bible says we must not seek. The good and responsible people are those who strive each day to be in harmony with the teachings of the Bible."

Following the sermon, the Rev. J. F. Moses, pastor of the church, told the congregation he expected each member to do his full duty in contributing toward the $200 to be raised at the morning services and the $350 to be raised at the evening services. He stated that the drive was for the new church that replaced the one burned down nine months ago and that it must be paid for in four months. An additional feature of the service was the choir singing.

SHERIFF PROBING MYSTERY OF DEATH IN FIRE AT BARN

Nashville, Tenn., August 28.—(AP)—The immediate burial of a man's body found in the ashes of a barn near Laverne, Tenn., this morning, after the barn had burned during the night leaves room for inquiry, according to Sheriff W. M. Powers of Rutherford county.

The body, according to Coroner J. T. Woodfin, who was summoned from Murfreesboro, was so badly burned that he deemed an inquest useless. The barn, on the N. W. Carter place, burned at 11 o'clock Saturday night, and the body was found this morning by N. W. Carter, Jr.

Carroll Holt, 19-year-old boy, who visited the Carter home Saturday, was missing. The father of the youth was called but could not identify the body as that of his son.

Aluminum street cars, which are lighter and quieter than steel, are being tried out in several cities.

ESTABLISHED CONNECTIONS

Executives want established connections—sources of supply, advertising agencies, and direct advertising organizations for the same reasons that they want permanent and competent lieutenants. Without a staff the best conceived plans fail.

The RURALIST PRESS has been established for many years as an established connection for many of the largest firms in this territory, and our value to them has grown proportionately.

O. HENRY TABLET UNVEILED SUNDAY AT ASHEVILLE

Asheville, N. C., August 28.—(P)—Dr. Archibald Henderson, of the University of North Carolina, speaking on "The International Fame of O'Henry," was heard by a tremendous crowd at Calvary Episcopal church at Fletcher this afternoon on the occasion of the unveiling of a tablet to William Sidney Porter, "O'Henry," famous writer of short stories. During the course of the program greetings were read from Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York; Governor Angus W. McLean, of North Carolina, and Mayor James Walker, of New York city. Dr. W. P. Beal, of Greensboro, life-long friend of O'Henry, read several stories by the famous author that have never been printed. The letter from Mayor Walker declared that plans were on foot in New York to erect a similar tablet where he did much of his work.

MACON FUNERAL FOR L. J. KILBURN

Funeral services for L. J. Kilburn, 62, prominent in the public life of Georgia, and a former representative from Bibb county in the legislature, who died suddenly at his residence, 1349 Greenview street, S. W., at 11 o'clock Saturday night, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at Macon, where the body will be taken for interment.

Mr. Kilburn arose as usual Saturday morning apparently in good health. Early in the evening he went downtown and talked with friends. Returning to his home he suffered a stroke of paralysis and died before medical aid could reach him. The body will be sent from the funeral parlors of H. M. Patterson & Son to Macon at 7:45 o'clock this morning via the Central of Georgia railway. Funeral services will be from the Burghard chapel at Macon.

Mr. Kilburn was formerly a member of the state industrial commission and was employed by the commission at the time of his death. He was president of the state federation of labor some years ago. Born in South Carolina, Mr. Kilburn migrated to Macon, where he served as superintendent of the mechanical department on the Macon News. Following his appointment to the industrial commission he moved to Atlanta, where he has resided since.

He grieved about him a wide circle of friends through the magnetism of his personality and was well known in fraternal quarters. He was a Shriner and an Elk.

Besides his wife, Mr. Kilburn is survived by his son Roy Kilburn, of Atlanta, and a grandson Lew Kilburn.

WOMAN RETURNS TO FIND HUSBAND HAS ENDED LIFE

Jacksonville, Fla., August 28.—(P)—When Mrs. Robert L. Fernley stepped from a train at terminal station here this afternoon she was informed by her son, Robert, that her husband had ended his life less than two hours before her arrival.

Ill health was given by relatives as the cause of Fernley shooting himself. Mrs. Fernley returned this afternoon from New York, where she had been spending a vacation.

WOMAN AIRPLANE PILOT IS INJURED AS SHIP CRASHES

Memphis, Tenn., August 28.—(P)—Mrs. Phoebe Fairgrieve, 30, first woman to be licensed as an airplane pilot in the United States, and Leo Speltz, 21, Roanoke City, Mich., a passenger in Mrs. Omie's plane, were seriously injured here today when the machine crashed at a flying field.

Mrs. Omie received a fractured arm and ankle while Speltz had a broken foot and body bruises. They were at a hospital tonight where they were being observed for possible internal injuries.

It was Speltz' first trip in a plane. He was the guest of Earl Allstadt, Jr., owner of the ship, and Allstadt had persuaded Mrs. Omie to take him on a flight. After circling the field several times, the pilot banked the ship preparatory to landing. It was believed Speltz' inexperience as a flyer caused him to lose his feet against the controls in cockpit, thereby rendering it impossible for the pilot to get back control. The ship, a new one, slid around until it struck the ground, demolishing it.

INCREASE IS SHOWN IN AUTO FATALITIES

Washington, August 28.—(United News)—Automobiles are becoming more deadly every year according to department of commerce figures. There were 500 deaths in the four weeks ending August 13 directly attributed to automobiles, most of them being in cities rather than in open country.

Deaths from automobile accidents in 1926 were 4,625 for the year, an increase of 7 per cent in the death rate per thousand of population.

Winter months show more accidents than summer months, despite increased traffic during the touring season.

TO ELECT TRUSTEES ON POLICE PENSIONS

Election of two trustees to fill vacancies on the board of the police pension fund, left by retirement of Detective J. T. Malcolm and Police Captain Grover C. Fain will take place on September 6, it was announced at police headquarters Sunday night.

Candidates offering for the office include Lieutenants Scott and Roberts and Patrolmen S. J. Roberts and W. A. Adair. Management of the police pension fund, which is a mutual benefit arrangement maintained by the police, is in the hands of the board of trustees, to which regular elections are held.

Woman's Murder Brings Campaign Against Gamblers

(By leased wire to The Constitution.)
Chicago, Ill., August 28.—As a result of the killing of Mrs. Eliza A. Hill and the accusation that her son, Harry A. Hill, had murdered her, a campaign to close the gambling halls and moonshine parlors in Streator will be launched tomorrow afternoon at a mass meeting in the local Y. M. C. A.

Six ministers, two of whom were present today on the day following the death of the wealthy Mrs. Hill, are taking the lead in the movement to do away with the dens to whose evil influence the downfall of Harry Hill, once regarded as a model young citizen, is attributed.

Most bitter in the arraignment of the gamblers who are said to prey on the youth of Streator was the Rev. G. M. Elsbree, pastor of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Hill and her son were members of his church and Mrs. Hill was one of the most active in promoting its welfare.

So far no trace has been found of young Hill, who is believed by friends to have fled west. State's Attorney Russell O. Hanson said that all clues received since his Monday, when the body of Mrs. Hill was found in a shallow grave in her basement, had been followed without result.

A search of Mrs. Hill's large home failed to disclose the presence of any of her jewelry. Even her wedding ring and engagement ring were missing.

Reds To Inhabit Bethnal Green, Loved by Pepys

London, August 28.—(P)—Bethnal Green, where Samuel Pepys picked "the largest quantity of strawberries I ever saw, and very good," but which has degenerated into a slum district largely tenanted by weavers, is the theater of a new communist experiment.

A block of de luxe flats, christened "Leisure Estate," has been opened for occupancy. Sixteen hundred persons applied for rental of the apartments of which there are only 32. The building, built on the site of the old tenements that form its background.

The building covers a half-acre of ground, the site being at the junction of Cambridge road and Park street. It was built under direction of the borough council's housing committee, which boasts that the flats are the finest and most modern in London's East Side.

Ceremonies marked the opening last week. A large commemorative marble tablet on which was inscribed the names of communist and socialist counselors, with golden capitals, was unveiled before a large crowd.

JACKSON HATCHERY MAY RUN THIS FALL

Jackson, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—To take care of the expanding poultry industry in Butts county plans are being made for the operation of the Jackson hatchery during the fall season. The incubator will be set on September 15, providing enough orders are booked to justify operation.

The spring season proved the best in the history of the hatchery and thousands of chickens were placed on the farms in this and adjoining counties. The hatchery has a capacity of 10,000 eggs and was installed by the Jackson Ice corporation for the benefit of farmers of this community.

The poultry industry here has grown to a source of dependable cash income and the receipts amount to more than $50,000 per year from chickens and eggs.

WAYCROSS TO DEDICATE PARK WITH EXERCISES

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—On Wednesday evening, August 31, 31, Folk park, many trees will be formally dedicated as a city park, it was announced today by E. K. Bennett, chairman of the park and tree commission.

The Y. M. C. A. band will give a concert, after which dedicatory addresses will be made by Mrs. J. L. Walker, Judge H. B. Reed and E. K. Bennett. After the addresses there will be a male quartet and community singing. The community singing will be led by W. C. Parker.

MRS. KATE HOLLEMAN DIES AT WAYCROSS

Waycross, Ga., August 28.—(Special.)—Mrs. Kate Smith Holleman, one of the most beloved women of Waycross, died Saturday morning at her home, 815 Brunel street. Mrs. Holleman was the widow of William H. Holleman, who was connected with the Atlantic Coast Line railroad here for a number of years.

S. R. JACQUES DIES AT MACON HOME

Macon, Ga., August 28.—(P)—S. R. Jacques, 57, for many years at the head of a wholesale grocery house here and one of the principal owners of the Julius Milling company, died this morning after an illness of two months. He was a native of the community where he died, having been born within four miles of his present home.

Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at Philadelphia Baptist church at 2:30 o'clock. He is survived by five sons and five daughters as follows: J. J. Robertson, of Decatur; T. C. Robertson, of Atlanta; G. C. R. O., and J. C. Robertson, of Lithonia; Mrs. J. E. Stephenson, of Shreveport, La.; Mrs. S. R. Stanley, of Milledgeville; Mrs. Fred Grist, of Dillard; Mrs. U. C. Goddard, of Lithonia, and Mrs. Harwell Houseworth, of Atlanta.

At the outbreak of the war between the states, S. R. Jacques joined the confederate army against the protest of his father, who disinherited him for enlisting in the forces of his adopted land.

Mr. Jacques enlisted in the confederate army as a private, was soon made a first sergeant and later was commissioned a major. He seemed to have led a charmed life during his years of valiant service, for though never wounded a bullet once tore through his sleeve and at another time the thick sole of his boot was shot away.

He was captured in battle near Richmond, Va., but before being taken prisoner, rather than surrender his sword to the enemy he cast it into the waters of the river over which the troops were marching. In his prison for six weeks at the Rip Rap on the coast of Virginia, near Norfolk.

After being exchanged Mr. Jacques reentered the confederate army. He served until the close of the war. He returned to Columbus, Ga., then went to Dalton, Ga., and 60 years ago came to Macon.

Mr. Jacques first business venture in Macon was in a wholesale grocery establishment, operating under the firm name of Jacques & Lightfoot, formed here in 1887. The name of the firm was later changed to Jacques & Johnson and still later to S. R. Jacques & company. Afterward Mr. Jacques became associated with T. D. Finley and the firm was continued under the name of S. R. Jacques & Tinsley company.

Mr. Jacques was also associated with the Juliette Milling company and has taken an active part in that business, with J. N. Birch as his associate, for the last 25 years.

In 1881 Mr. Jacques was married to Miss Eleanor Harley Hall, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hall. She died on January 3 of this year.

He is survived by two children, Samuel Randolph Jacques, Jr., of Dalton, and Louis F. Jacques, of Dover, Mass., and one granddaughter, Constance Jacques Wadley.

REV. GOODPASTURE IN LAST SERMON AT LOCAL CHURCH

But few dry eyes could be found in the vast crowd that gathered in Sunday morning services at the Church of Christ, corner West End avenue and Wellborn street, as they heard the pastor, B. C. Goodpasture, bid the churchmen and congregation he has served for the past seven years.

The minister, who was completely overcome by his feelings and emotions, preached a touching sermon on "The Eternal City of God." "There will be no separations there, no pain, sorrow or anguish, neither anxiety or care," the preacher said, as he launched into a vivid description of the new heaven, as set forth in the Book of Revelation.

Twelve additions were made to the church as the result of the sermon. One of these, baptizing Sunday night service, was a man 81 years of age. He was so feeble that he had to be assisted down the steps into the pool.

As a token of love and esteem the congregation, through Elder Farmer, presented the pastor with a fine watch. There will come a time when I will have no need for it and could not use the watch; there will come a time to each and all of us when we will neither need clock or watch to reckon time with; but I dare say that there will never be the time when we shall fail to cherish the friendship, love and affections of our fellow man, and the spirit in which the watch is presented is far more valuable to me than the time-piece," the pastor said.

Brother Goodpasture, who has won distinction as an orator and preacher, suffered a breakdown physically at the close of a strenuous 3-week evangelistic campaign, during which more than 125 members were added to the West End congregation. The membership of this church has more than doubled under the leadership of Pastor Goodpasture, now plans as a new being perfected for the establishment of a church on the north side of town.
